WOULD AWE JAPS BY NAVAL CRUISE

Imposing Scheme to Send U. S. Battleship Fleet Around World Makes European Nations Gasp.

TO STEAM 35,000 KNOTS.

No Other Power Would Dare Risk Sudden Invasion by Leaving Its Shores Unguarded for a Year.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Instructions have been received at the navy department to make preparations for the voyage around the world by the battleship fleet. The cruise will begin in December and end early next fall. The ships will start from New York and return to cast anchor at New York.

It will be the most tremendous naval demonstration the world ever has seen—not in number of ships, for Great Britain has a force almost three times more powerful—but in the ability of the American government to transport such large modern fighting craft to any possible scene of action.

It will give Japan and Europe an object lesson. The administration thinks it about time they should have an object lesson in the efficiency of the American naval officers and American seamen, which it is alleged abroad they do not possess. It also will have the effect of making the officers more skillful in maneuvers and provide them with that training in fleet battle tactics which they have not had up to this time.

Real Purpose to Awe Japs?

There is not the slightest doubt in diplomatic circles that the real purpose of the president's move is to awe Japan. That nation has just done what foreigners anticipated—replied to the action of the president by the organization of the new squadron at Hongkong. It was from this point that Admiral Dewey started on his voyage in 1898 which ended in the conquest of the Philippines. Lying but 600 miles from Manila, Hongkong furnishes an admirable base for naval operations. The United States can no more object to the proximity of the Japanese squadron to the Philippines than Japan can object to the dispatch of the battleship fleet to the Pacific and thence to the Atlantic.

If trouble should arise, the Japanese command will be in a position to descend quickly upon Manila and Olongapo and gobble up the small craft which this government has left in the islands and wreak as much damage as possible before the arrival of the battleship fleet. An attack on the Philippines would mean that the far east would be the theater of war and it would be to that distant scene the United States would have to go in order to carry on hostilities.

Move to Recover Prestige.

In other words, Japan has taken steps to recover the prestige lost by the president's decision to send the battleship fleet to the Pacific. This, at least, is the view of diplomats and of well informed naval officers. It is a move which the administration will use to justify the orders to the battleship fleet should justification be necessary.

The time allowed by the navy department for the cruise around the world will not be too much for a fleet that will have to sail with the deliberation a battleship command must observe.

As announced after the conference at Oyster Bay the other day, the fleet will leave New York, stop at Trinidad, off the east coast of Venezuela, call again at Rio de Janeiro, put in at Sandy Point in the straits of Magellan, proceed thence to Callao, Peru, and Magdalena bay, where target practice will be held. From Magdalena bay the ships will steam to San Francisco and may go to Puget sound for docking.

Fleet Will Steam 35,000 Knots.

To traverse this distance the ships must steam 18,600 knots. From San Francisco to Manila the fleet will have to cover 7,240 knots. Because of the possibility the Suez canal cannot accommodate battleships of the draft of the Louisiana type, it is possible the ships will have to round the Cape of Good Hope. Coming via canal the fleet would cover 12,000 knots. Passing around the Cape of Good Hope the distance would be about 3,000 knots longer; so, to sum up, the total distance the fleet will have to make, unless the present program is modified, will be about 35,000 knots.

Steaming at an average speed of ten knots per hour the vessels would have no difficulty in making the trip within the time fixed, though they will not have much opportunity for target practice, coaling, and visiting en route. The belief at the navy department is that the trip will last well into the fall of the next year.

It is an undertaking, however, into which the officers have thrown themselves with the greatest zest. Not only is it necessary to arrange for coal for the entire trip—an enormous quantity must be provided—but other stores are necessary and arrangements for repairs are essential. Moreover, the fleet always must be in such condition that if in the middle of the Indian ocean the government should find it necessary to send it back to the Pacific to defend American interests in that ocean, or to hurry it to the Atlantic for a like purpose, it will be able to start instantly and find ample provisions along the route. All these considerations are making the navy department hum like a hive.

Success Means World Record.

Successfully executed, the cruise will be a monument to American efficiency, which, it is declared, cannot be overestimated. There is no nation in the world that would dare adopt such a plan. The impertinence of it is making foreign attachés gasp. England would not denude her shores of fighting strength for an instant. Germany, taking advantage of the absence of steel walls, promptly would throw an army into the "tight little isle." France maintains two squadrons, one in the Mediterranean and the other on her west coast. Germany keeps her battleships at home.

Indeed, the policy of all great European powers has been and is to concentrate their entire naval fighting strength in home waters, where they can be utilized for home defense. Russia deemed it necessary during the war with Japan to dispatch a fleet from the Baltic to Tsushima straits, where it was destroyed. The United States not only will dispatch a fleet of far greater power, but will transport it more than double the distance. The splendid geographical isolation of the United States makes this action possible without the element of danger which it would possess for European powers.

EXPLOSION MAKES GAMBLERS QUAKE

Terrific Concussion Hurts Two Men and Stirs Neighborhood of John O'Malley's Saloon.

BOMB WRECKS BASEMENT.

But Dynamiter's Guess Is Poor One and He Damages Wrong Building, Then Disappears from Scene.

The neighborhood of North Clark and Kinzie streets, dominated by John F. O'Malley's saloon and gambling house, was shaken by a tremendous explosion of nitroglycerin or dynamite at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning. Windows in three big buildings along Kinzie street were shattered and two men were thrown down and injured by the concussion.

The explosion from all appearances marked the second attempt within a month to wreck O'Malley's place. It is another chapter in the story of the reign of terror in the present gamblers' war. It is the opinion of the police that the men who threw the explosive were the same gang of ex-constables and criminals who have been using this desperate method to force themselves back on the pay roll of the big gambling syndicates, from which they were separated a few months ago.

Either through an accident, through a mistake of the buildings, or because of fright, the "soup" throwers got into the wrong basement. O'Malley's place was about the only one on the north side of Kinzie street that escaped damage. The explosive was thrown in a basement entrance identical in appearance with O'Malley's, but leading into the gasfitters' workshop of the Carmichael Stove company at 197-199 Kinzie street, three buildings east of O'Malley's.

Basement Wrecked; No Robbery.

The Carmichael building, three stories built of brick, received the principal damage. The basement was a mass of broken glass and fixtures. Four heavy doors were blown down. Nearly all the windows in the upper part of the building were broken. The office of the stove company was undisturbed except for the débris blown in through the huge gap in the front window. No attempt at robbery had been made.

The only persons moving about the neighborhood at that hour of the morning were night watchmen and a porter or two. Such night prowlers or gamblers as happened to be around the saloon made no mention of the fact. When the terrific concussion came and the sound of glass falling, there were few to feel the effects. John Walker, watchman in the Creamery Package Manufacturing company at 186 Kinzie street, was thrown to the floor by the shock and bruised. Jack Hanna, night engineer in the Sibley warehouse around the corner, had the same experience. Neither man was injured seriously.

Walker declared to the police that when the explosion occurred he was on the second floor of the building at 188 Kinzie street. When he reached the windows, he told the police, he saw two men running west in Kinzie street. He gave a description of the men to the police.

Considerable damage was done to the windows in the buildings occupied by F. B. Loebman, whiskies, 193 Kinzie street; Spangenberg & Co., commission merchants, 201 Kinzie street; and A. Dagger & Co., chemists, 195 Kinzie street.

The occupants of O'Malley's saloon and the Richmond hotel overhead, tenanted principally by theatrical people, also received a shaking up. The night porter in the saloon happened to be on the sidewalk at the time. An empty automobile was standing at the side entrance to the saloon.

Sees Man Sneak Along Street.

Just before the explosion the porter noticed a man in a light straw hat coming along the dark side of the street in the direction of the automobile and the basement entrance. The porter watched him, thinking he was trying to make a "sneak" with the machine. He disappeared in the shadows of the north side of the street and the porter saw him running east toward the river. A few seconds later the explosion came. The porter now is of the opinion that the man was looking for O'Malley's basement, but was frightened away. He succeeded in accomplishing his purpose in frightening the north side gambling clique at least. O'Malley and his lieutenants were in a panic as a result of this affair.

Inspector Revere of the Chicago avenue station and D. L. Carmichael, vice president of the stove company, went over the ground of the explosion thoroughly in the afternoon. Investigation in the basement showed that the explosive had been thrown down the stairway against the heavy locked doors leading into the shop. The inspector said it undoubtedly was nitroglycerin. No entrance had been made to any part of the building. The safe in the office was untouched.

Mr. Carmichael told the police he had enemies, especially among Greek restaurant keepers.

Simply Tossing Explosive Away.

"It looks as if some safeblower had come along here and thrown his bottle down the stairway just to get rid of it," said the inspector. "If he had directed his attack against the Carmichael Stove company he could have found many more effective ways of working his revenge. No robber would call attention at the outset to his presence."

The police were reluctant to admit any further annoyance had been intended toward O'Malley. The detectives visited the saloonkeeper before starting out on their hunt.

Calls Dynamite Talk Absurd.

"This talk about dynamite or some other explosive being meant for my place of business is absurd," said O'Malley. "I don't mix with the gamblers and have no enemies. The alleged attempt to dynamite my place several weeks ago was all 'bunk.'

"I have talked with Mr. Carmichael about the explosion and he thinks the two men seen by my porter and several other persons wrecked his building."

ENGLISH MARRIAGE LAW SAFE

Deceased Wife's Sister Bill Passes House of Lords Committee.

ENDS LONG, BITTER FIGHT.

Measure Is Retroactive and Will "Legitimatize" Thousands.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1907: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Aug. 25.—After agitation extending over half a century marriage with a deceased wife's sister soon will be made legal in England, the bill before parliament having passed the committee stage in the house of lords.

Opponents of the measure fought strenuously to the last, but the time worn arguments failed to have the effect they had in previous years. The idea that marriages of the kind were immoral came into Britain with the reformation, that zealous maintainer of the sanctity of Christian matrimony, Henry VIII., having sought to crystallize in an act of parliament his rejection of papal supremacy, and in striking at the pope's claim to grant dispensations he imposed upon English ecclesiastical law the Levitical code of marriage.

Origin of the Law.

What is known as Lord Lyndhurst's act, passed in 1835, making marriage with a deceased wife's sister null and void, also owed its inception to purely personal reasons. Lyndhurst's act, in fact, belonged to the "chronique scandaleuse" of English political life. A famous duke had contracted an alliance of the kind and approached the chancellor of the day, Lord Lyndhurst, with the object of getting an act of parliament passed making the legitimacy of his matrimonial venture beyond dispute. Lyndhurst put through parliament an act making all existing marriages with deceased wives' sisters valid and making them illegal in the future, thereby obliging his ducal friend and at the same time propitiating the clergy.

As the origin of the law is curious, so also has been the conflict, for it has shown a phenomenon rare in English history, the participation of princes of the blood royal, who seldom, in whatever part they played behind the scenes, mingled in the actual fray. Time after time the present king, when prince of Wales, voted in favor of the passage of the bill legalizing marriages of this sort.

Royal support on one occasion, in 1896, carried the bill through the house of lords, but the commons refused to take it into consideration. It was then a private measure, and the bill now before parliament is the first in the history of the conflict that has been sponsored by the government.

Will Legitimatize Thousands.

The Archbishop of Canterbury in an impassioned appeal to the lords to throw out the bill contended that in its effect upon the life and morality of the people of the country the change would cause more distress and inconvenience than it would alleviate, and that the general tendency would be for ill rather than good. It was pointed out in reply that most people knew cases within their own personal circle where the prohibition caused great hardship and where either the parties had broken the letter of the law and gone elsewhere to be married or that the marriage, which would have been desirable for the parties themselves and beneficial for their children, had not taken place.

It is estimated about 1,800 such unions are contracted every year and that about 9,000 children are born "illegitimate."

The bill, which now is held to be safe, will be speedily entered upon the statute book. It has a retroactive effect and will legalize all marriages with deceased wives' sisters that have taken place since 1835, though it will not disturb property which may have changed hands under the old law.

MEETS GIRL, WOOES AND WEDS HER, ALL WITHIN SIX DAYS.

New Yorker Hero in Sudden Courtship in Which English Woman Is the Other Principal.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—John Gallagher, private secretary to Philip S. Dean, head of the legal department of the Lawyers' Title, Insurance and Trust company, 37 Liberty street, Manhattan, won his young bride after a sudden courtship. It began on Thursday of last week, when Richard Barnes, late of London, and his daughter, Louise, 22 years old, walked into the trust company's office.

Mr. Barnes was thinking of buying property in Connecticut and wished to have the title searched. Mr. Gallagher, being only 25 years old, insisted that the two remain until Mr. Dean returned. The father had business in the neighborhood, however, and left his daughter in the secretary's office while he went to transact it.

It was necessary for Mr. Barnes to call at the office on the following day. The daughter was with him, and it is believed that the couple became engaged at that time. Mrs. Gallagher broke the news to the girl's father on Sunday.

"NAN" PATTERSON FORCED TO FLEE BY "ANGEL'S" FRIENDS.

Former Chorus Girl Is Said to Have Threatened Life of Pittsburg Steel Magnate While Intoxicated.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—It came out today that another sensational chapter has been added to the book of "Nan" Patterson, the former chorus girl who was tried for the shooting of Cæsar Young, the New York bookmaker in a cab in Broadway, who has just fled Pittsburg at the "request" of friends of a wealthy steel magnate, whose life she threatened.

Miss Patterson is alleged by friends of the wealthy "angel" to have threatened his life one night when she was intoxicated, and fearing she would make good her threat it was made plain to her that she must go, so she was sent to Washington, D. C., where she now is supposed to be. In the meantime the steel man, who has offices in the Frick building here, is ill as the result of the excitement.

The incident occurred at a roadhouse a few miles from McKeesport, where Miss Patterson had been living in style.

HARNESSES SUN TO ENGINE

Noted Inventor Uses Farmer's Hotbed to Raise Power.

TURNS LIGHT INTO HEAT.

Commercial Use of Solar Rays Made Possible, Frank Shuman Says.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—By using the principle of the common hotbed by which farmers grow fresh vegetables in the dead of winter, Frank Shuman, engineer and chemist, thinks he has solved the old problem of converting the heat of the sun into power at such a low cost that its commercial use is possible.

He has now running an engine that gets its power from the sun and it is so simple that a child can operate it. Shuman, who is the inventor of the concrete file used in all skyscrapers and the wire glass, says his machine will revolutionize the motive power of the world.

On the Shuman property in Tacony there is what looks like a big hotbed, 18x60 feet. It is simply a big wooden box sunk into the ground and covered with a double top of ordinary hothouse glass, with a one inch air space between the layers.

Instead of being filled with vegetables, however, it is filled with coiled iron pipes. These pipes, which are filled with ether, connect with a small upright engine hard by.

Sun Does Work of Fuel.

The circuit is known as a "closed one"; that is, the ether in the pipes is converted to vapor in the big box, passes through the engine, developing three and a half horse power, thence into a condenser, and back again to the hot box.

No fuel is used, the heat of the sun being relied upon to convert the liquid into vapor. In the tropics water could take the place of ether, Shuman says.

The light rays of the sun in this latitude can be converted into heat and they will yield high temperatures. In the tropics this would run to perhaps 500 degrees or higher. The light rays penetrate the double glass cover and are absorbed and converted into heat rays by the dark metallic surfaces of the pipes. The air space prevents the heat from escaping, and whatever is in the pipes will boil.

No Good in Cloudy Weather.

If there is water in the pipes it will be turned into steam and that steam can be used to run an engine. This small hot box, if in the tropics, the investor says, would yield about thirty horse power.

Chief Moore of the weather bureau and a string of scientists are coming to see the machine work. Before the patent office would take any stock in it an expert was sent on and he became convinced.

Shuman, who is a wealthy man, frankly admits that his machine will not run in cloudy weather. He believes that by using his solar engine to make liquid air, which in turn can be transported anywhere, coal will be displaced.

WANT A SUBWAY: LOOP OVERTAXED

Ald. Foreman Demands Relief for Crowded 'L' Structure; B. J. Arnold Wants Substitution.

COURT WAR IS POSSIBLE.

Northwestern Opposes Abandonment of Present System; Surface Lines Neutral; Merchants Divided.

The "L" Loop vs. the Subway is the title of the case now interesting every person concerned in Chicago's complex intra-mural transportation problem. On all hands it is conceded it is the most important question which must be settled before traction service in this city can be put on a satisfactory basis.

It is interesting as well as important. There are so many interests involved and of course the same number of more or less widely differing ideas that the investigator can get almost any kind of an opinion he wants. One bald fact is, however, acknowledged on all sides.

The present union loop is inadequate to the work it was erected to do. Not even the owners of the loop deny that.

In this emergency the subway system has been offered, not only to solve the loop problem but the problems which will soon begin to bother the surface lines as well. Nobody seems to quarrel seriously with the idea that a subway is needed.

Thus far there is no real difference of opinion. But how and when the subway shall be built, what its extent shall be, and more important yet what work it shall perform has excited the controversy. Here the varying interests come in.

Two Relief Plans Suggested.

Putting aside the interests of the surface roads and dealing only with the troubles of the elevated ones on the loop, two suggestions are made as to its usefulness in solving the loop problem. One might be called the conservative view. It is that the loop be allowed to stand and the subway be simply a method of relieving it. This is advocated by Ald. Foreman, chairman of the council committee on local transportation.

The more radical view is that of Bion J. Arnold, head of the board of supervising engineers now in charge of the surface line rehabilitation work. He advocates taking the loop down entirely and substituting a comprehensive subway which will take care of all "L" trains in the downtown district as well as what present surface cars will have to be put underground.

Chairman Foreman also has in mind a system of "shuttle trains" on the loop, a kind of belt line which would act as a sort of temporary relief while the subway is being built. Mr. Arnold opposes this. He says the subways which would afford permanent relief can be built in three years, and anything in the nature of a compromise in the meantime would simply give an excuse for the postponing of the day when a satisfactory and permanent settlement can be had.

Want No More Loop Additions.

The alderman and the engineer unite on one proposition. Whether it be for either temporary or permanent relief, there must be no more additions to the loop structure. They would simply congest traffic in the downtown district, and what is wanted is to relieve and not add to the present congestion. It is already extending to the north and west sides and as far south as Twenty-second street. It is interfering not only with ordinary pedestrian and street locomotion but with the prompt service by street car companies as well.

It is here the various personal interests come in. Some of them are back of the Foreman plan to have a subway as a relief to the loop. Some of them want the loop taken down entirely. One at least is anxious that things be left exactly as they are. The interests of the "L" roads which use the loop differ.

Northwestern's Attitude.

The Northwestern, which virtually owns the loop, although the legal title is in an independent company, naturally is satisfied with the present conditions, although it would like to enlarge the structure. As soon as the Evanston branch of the Milwaukee road is electrified to Evanston, within a few weeks, it will deliver more passengers to the Northwestern at Wilson avenue, and they will want to go around the loop. The Northwestern "L" does not want to abandon the loop, neither does it want to put any of its cars into a subway. It would have to pay toll on cars running through a subway.

Its remedy is to enlarge the loop by the building of longer platforms, so that more cars can stop at a station, and perhaps additions to it in Clark or some other street. It is unalterably opposed to taking the structure out entirely, and would fight such a proposition to the highest courts. The Lake street "L," or the Oak Park road, as it is now called, is of the same opinion. The Northwestern owns it.

The Metropolitan "L's" attitude is different. It is a tenant of the union loop, and is now in the courts claiming it cannot get enough space on the loop to accommodate its passengers. In one way it would make no difference to the Metropolitan whether it went into a subway or kept on the loop. It would have to pay toll in either instance. It would, however, cost it considerable to change its equipment so it could go into a subway, and if it can get space enough on a loop it is content. But it wants that space. The Alley "L," while not as badly off just now as the Metropolitan, is looking forward to the same condition.

Waiting Policy by Surface Lines.

The surface lines are neutral in the controversy. They recognize the fact that a subway must be built sooner or later and a provision for one is incorporated in their ordinance. They would, however, prefer to postpone the building for some time, as they would have to advance a good part of the money for the work, and money is not too easily had just at this time. Under the ordinances their cars are to have preference in any subway which may be built and the elevated ones take second place, but both Ald. Foreman and Engineer Arnold say this is no difficulty. The subway could be built large enough to accommodate all.

President Mitten of the Chicago City thinks Mr. Arnold is too optimistic in his estimate of the time in which a subway can be built. He said yesterday it would take much longer than three years. In this, however, he is considering the time necessary to pass an ordinance and finance the enterprise. Mr.

Arnold was speaking simply of construction work.

The surface companies are, however, opposed to any additions to the present loop structure. They argue that the loop is a large factor in the traffic congestion on the downtown streets. If there were more of the loop there would be more congestion. These companies would like to see the loop out of the way entirely. The more traffic congestion the more difficult and expensive for them to move their cars when they get downtown.

What Merchants Think of Loop.

Then come in other interests. The Wabash avenue merchants want the loop taken out entirely. It hurts their street. The State street people are indifferent. It works both ways with them. It lands lots of people within a block of their stores, but at the same time increases their rents. A subway would land more people, and one in State street could be used to give access to their stores through basement entrances. They want the subway on the principle the more people brought downtown the better, but are not personally interested in what becomes of the loop.

"The subway is the only solution of the trouble," said Ald. Foreman. "It cannot be figured out any other way. Talk about extending or enlarging the loop is absolutely useless. In the first place it would do no good, and in the second it would make conditions worse instead of better than they are now.

"The only way the loop can be enlarged is by building new elevated structures in other streets. It has been proposed, for instance, that a branch be built in Clark street from Lake to Van Buren and separate tracks be provided for all the four roads now using the loop structure. That would mean putting more posts in downtown streets.

"An elevated structure congests the traffic in a street. The supporting posts must be put either outside or inside the curb lines. If they and the stairways are outside the curbs they narrow the street and congest team traffic that way. If they are inside they narrow the sidewalks and congest pedestrian traffic. In neither case should any more be allowed in the already too congested downtown district.

"That district is getting larger every day. Traffic is now congested as far north as Chicago avenue and as far west as Halsted street, while on the south side Twelfth street ceased to be the limit a long while ago. It would be the height of folly for the city to consent to anything which makes it worse.

Subway from Curb to Curb.

"A subway can be built under the downtown streets, reaching from curb to curb. There would be room enough in it not only for such surface cars as need to be put in, but the overflow from the elevated roads besides. The subway sidewalk space could also be made valuable, so that merchants would be willing to pay a fair price for its use. There could be sidewalks under the present ones, with basement entrances into the stores and passengers alighting from the cars who desired to enter these stores would not have to go to the street surface at all. In looking at the subway in New York I wondered why they had not done this there.

"If it is necessary to give temporary relief to the loop while the subways are being built, it can be turned into a belt line. The roads using it can have but end terminal stations at its edges and give transfers to the shuttle trains running around the loop. The result of this would be that passengers wanting to go only a block or so from the terminal would walk rather than take the trouble of transferring and the ones left to use the loop would be those who had some considerable distance to go."

"Do you contemplate using the subway as a relief to the loop or a substitute for it?" was asked the chairman of the local transportation committee.

As Relief, Not Substitute.

"As a relief. It is a question whether the city can order the loop out. It certainly could not get it out until after long litigation. While the Supreme court has practically held that the loop was erected without legal warrant, yet the city has slept on its rights so long it is doubtful whether it can exercise them now. A city, like a private individual, can be guilty of laches."

The Supreme court decision to which Ald. Foreman referred was in a case brought by a Wabash avenue property holder alleging the ordinance allowing the erection of the loop was invalid. The court practically said it was, but denied the suit for the reason that the only person entitled to bring it was the city of Chicago or the state of Illinois.

"The subway should be built as a substitute for the loop," declared Bion J. Arnold. "It should not be regarded simply as a means of relief from present conditions. The loop should be taken out entirely and the streets cleaned for traffic.

"There is no physical or mechanical difficulty in the way. It is a simple proposition in engineering. It is an entirely feasible project. A subway could be built which would accommodate not only the surface cars but the elevated ones as well. For a subway we could use all or any of the streets we wanted and there would be no trouble in providing room enough for all the cars.

Could Be Built in Three Years.

"As for time, the subway could be built in three years and the union loop taken down. I am opposed to adopting any temporary relief in the meantime. The shuttle train proposition is feasible enough but were it once installed it would be used as an argument for leaving things as they are. It simply would be a plea for further delay.

"It would be the wise plan for Chicago to demand the subway at once. If it consents to any compromises and makeshifts it will never get it. Anything in the way of temporary relief is simply an excuse for procrastination. The only wise plan is to decide on a permanent plan of settling the existing or plainly future troubles and go about putting it into effect.

"No plans have yet been drawn for a subway to accommodate both surface and elevated cars, but they can be easy enough. Until they are, however, the cost cannot be accurately told."

"Both elevated and surface cars are put into the subway in Boston," remarked President Mitten of the Chicago City road, "and I do not suppose there would be any great difficulty in doing the same thing in Chicago. A subway, however, as furnishing immediate relief for the union loop, would not be of any use. It would not help next week or next year. How long it would take to build it is problematical, but it would be a number of years, especially under present labor and financial conditions."

Ottumwa, Ia., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—In a rough coffin made of lumber which he had kept for years for the purpose, and with no service whatever, the body of Levi Orman was borne to the grave today, not in a hearse, but in an ordinary wagon—all in keeping with the wishes of the eccentric old man. Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—The mistake of a clerk in a hardware store at Sullivan prevented P. F. Anderson from committing suicide. LOCAL DEMOCRACY FLAYED BY WERNO

Radical Element Is Said to Have Made the Party One of Obstructionists.

CITES FIGHT ON CHARTER.

Former Alderman Prefers to Be Allied with Men Who Stand for Progress.

Charles E. Werno, who refused a renomination for alderman of the Twenty-third ward last spring when it meant a sure election, returned to Chicago yesterday and gave his reasons for quitting the democratic party. His statement was the most notable criticism yet made of the local democracy and incidentally of its opposition to the new charter.

In brief it was that the party, through the dominance of the radical element, had become an organization of obstruction and not construction. It could find fault, but suggest nothing. It had nothing to offer in the way of bettering conditions in Chicago, or in the state or nation. It was incapable of doing anything. Its present fight on the charter is the latest example.

Although Mr. Werno did not say so—it being a personal matter—it is well understood the never thoroughly explained change of front of ex-Mayor Dunne and the local democracy on the traction settlement had much to do with his loss of patience with the organization. When Ald. Werno was chairman of the committee on local transportation and the democratic leader in the council Mayor Dunne became enthusiastic over a settlement of the traction question on the lines afterwards adopted.

Wavering of Dunne Recalled.

The plan was agreed to and the "Werno letter" was written. Ald. Werno worked laboriously and honestly to bring about the settlement, but at the last moment Mayor Dunne repudiated everything he had formerly said or done, presumably at the dictation of the radicals who had promised to reelect him mayor, and Ald. Werno was left to make the fight by himself. He did it and won, but it was not in human nature to look at such happenings without at least some irritation.

"I had felt for some time," said Mr. Werno, "that I was gradually drifting away from the democratic party. If I were conceited enough, I might say the democratic party was drifting away from me. I was getting out of touch with the leaders of the local democracy. The faction dominating was entirely too radical for my ideas and my previously formed habits of thinking.

"The party had got to be one simply of obstruction. It made no offers or promises of constructive work. It had nothing to suggest which would help conditions in the city. It had no methods for better and cleaner streets, more satisfactory street car service, or any of the other things which are so important to Chicago and which it is the duty of a political party to provide.

Favors New Charter for City.

"The latest example is the party's opposition to the charter. I do not say the charter is ideal. There are a number of things which are not in it I would like to see there. But there are a number of things in it that I know, from my experience as an alderman, are needed, and nothing which is really objectionable. Now, to fight that charter simply because it does not contain everything you want is, to my mind, absurd. The charter is a step at any rate toward something better, and opposing it is simply blind obstruction.

"As for leaving the democratic party for the republican, I have not exactly done that. I did not join the republican organization—simply the Hamilton club. I did not want to get entirely away from a participation in public affairs.

"As far as the two parties are concerned, there is now not so much difference in principles anyhow. It is a difference in policies. President Roosevelt, for instance, is a good enough exponent of Jeffersonian principles for me. But looking around among my acquaintances I found the republicans at least trying to do something and the democrats trying to block everything. I prefer to be with the people who do something."

Private Affairs Need Attention.

Outside of his failure to agree longer with his old party, one of Mr. Werno's reasons for refusing a renomination was his desire to get out of the council so he could make a better living for himself. An alderman who attends conscientiously to city business has not much time for his private affairs, and he found that while he was getting a lot of glory out of the job, there was no money in it.

"I was better off sixteen years ago than I am now," he explained. "I built the flat in which I now live then, and had a small piece of property around the corner in Center street, which brought some income. Altogether I could collect about $150 month.

"As alderman I had a salary, but being in politics costs money, no matter how careful you are. I did not have as much money to spend on my family when I was alderman as I had before, but I never go so far as to sacrifice my property to political ambitions. I managed to hold on to what I had, but that was the best I could do."

Will Retain Present Residence.

Asked as to a reported change of residence the alderman laughed and said:

"That is a matter for the future. I shall live in the Twenty-third ward for some time yet. I have an interest in a vacant lot in the Twenty-fifth ward on which, if I ever get money enough, I want to build a house. But I have not got the money yet."

The Independence league has sent out a circular advising its members to vote against the charter. The argument made is it does not contain the features which the radicals who make up the league want. It was a brief of the speeches recently made by Dr. Howard S. Taylor, Henry M. Ashton, Raymond Robins, and the other pillars of the league.

WHAT CHICAGO'S PROPOSED CHARTER MEANS.

How Consolidation Will Facilitate Business Methods and Yet Make Popular Control Easier.

[The following is the first of a series of articles covering the most important features of the proposed charter, which has been written especially for THE TRIBUNE by Prof. C. E. Merriam, chairman of the charter committee on revenue and taxation, and a member of the subcommittee on the charter draft.]

BY PROF. C. E. MERRIAM.

NO. 1.—CONSOLIDATION.

THE movement for a new charter for Chicago arose from a desire for (1) unity in the local government; (2) municipal powers suitable to a cosmopolitan city; (3) revenue sufficient to maintain a great city; and (4) abolition of the so-called "justice shops." There were other reasons why a new charter was desirable, and important ones; but these were the main motives common to practically all citizens who helped to secure the charter amendment, authorizing a reorganizaton of our local system.

The multiplicity and confusion of the local governing bodies; the outgrown village charter, too short and small for the rapidly developing metropolis; the poverty of the city and its urgent need of larger funds; the vicious system of justice courts—these were the arguments employed to convince the legislature of the necessity of a special law for Chicago; to persuade the electors of the state of Illinois to adopt the proposed charter amendment; to secure the calling of a charter convention, and to obtain the passage of a charter bill through the legislature.

The justice shops were abolished by the act of 1905. In what measure have the remaining objects been attained in the proposed charter, and in what mode? This question I shall discuss in the following articles, and endeavor to answer. Whatever part prejudice and partisanship may play in the final disposition of the charter, every citizen owes it to himself and his city to make an impartial preliminary examination of a document so important to the future development of this community.

The first great purpose of the charter was to consolidate the various local governing bodies. For many years Chicago has been cursed by the presence of a group of overlapping and conflicting local governments. Ten years ago there were about twenty of these local governments, although Chicago was a unit, geographically, commercially, socially, and politically. There were seven towns wholly within the city, and five partly within: the county, the sanitary district, the North, West, and South park boards, the board of education, the public library board, and finally the city corporate. The towns are now practically abolished, with their financial functions transferred to the county, and their judicial functions to the new Municipal courts. The county and the sanitary district, under the terms of the charter amendment, cannot be consolidated with the city, and some system of unification must be worked out in the future. There remain, then, eight local governing bodies which may be combined. These are the city corporate, the board of education, the public library board, the North, West, and South park boards, and two small park boards, Ridge avenue and north shore. Each of these bodies has independent taxing power, and most of them also borrowing power, granted to them by the state legislature. Each is a separate governing body, exercising its authority either wholly or in part independently of all of the others and responsible to the governor of the state, the Circuit court judges of the county, the mayor of the city, or the people, as the case may be. Chicago is, in fact, a confederation of local governments instead of being a unified and consolidated city. It is time to get together in a governmental way.

The charter provides for the consolidation of these local governing bodies into one city government. The board of education and the public library board are made departments of the city government, while the five park boards are combined in one board of nine members, appointed by the mayor. Three members must be chosen from each side of the city, however. The legal and financial rights and obligations of these bodies are, of course, transferred to the city.

This plan insures, in the first place, central control of finances. There will be one central authority, which will have control over the appropriations for all municipal purposes.

In the case of schools, parks, and public library, application for appropriations will be made by these departments to the council for funds, but one unified budget must be voted for the entire city. Independent tax levies and independent bond issues will be no longer permissible, but the revenues and the credit of the city will be in charge of one central and responsible authority. At present each governing body drives ahead, securing what it can, and spending it with little or no regard to the others. That one unified authority can dispense the funds of the community more wisely and economically than eight separate governments can scarcely be doubted. This involves no reflection on the ability or honesty of the present governing boards of these various bodies, for the evil is inherent in the system itself rather than peculiar to particular individuals.

Consolidation also secures local control over local finances instead of state control. At present the income of Chicago is divided at Springfield. The legislature determines on what shall be given to each of the parks, how much to each of the two school funds, how much to the public library, and how much to the city proper. At no time, however, have all of these various needs ever been considered together and balanced one against the other. A mill here and a mill there, a bond issue here and another bond issue there, have been authorized; but no systematic consideration given to the relative merits of these local demands. Under the consolidated system, one local authority considering the various needs of the city as a whole will determine how much should be appropriated to each department. The haphazard plan will be replaced by a business system.

Furthermore, Chicago has reached a point where unity in respect to recreation facilities especially is absolutely indispensable. We must have one city plan, including the whole city, north, south, and west, business center, residence districts, lake front, boulevards, small parks, playgrounds, neighborhood centers, outer park belt, and all. We cannot well carry on this work if we must rely upon the cooperation of all of the governments now concerned. This unified plan and its physical and financial execution require one central authority dealing with the park problem as a unit. The proper, speedy, and economical treatment of the park situation does not concern any one side or section of the city alone, but is a matter of common interest to the entire community. For this purpose one park board is better than five.

As incidental advantages of park consolidation, it should be observed that under the provisions of the proposed charter park employés are placed under the merit system. This plan has been, to some extent, voluntarily adopted in some of the parks, but in many instances park positions have been used as political jobs. Under the charter these places would be placed under civil service regulations, as are other employés of the municipality. Furthermore, the park police, some 200 in number, will be made a part of the city police force, instead of being independent organizations, as at present.

So far as consolidation is concerned the charter certainly carries out the original purposes of the charter movement. The act of 1901 abolished town assessors and collectors; the act of 1905 abolished town constables and justices of the peace; the charter act completes the work of consolidation, excepting the inclusion of the county and the sanitary district, which could not, under the terms of the constitutional amendment, be consolidated. The charter makes possible a united Chicago, with central control over all local policies and local finances.

In brief, the consolidation features of the charter facilitate both business methods and democratic control. The unified financial authority makes possible systematic methods and business economies; and at the same time makes popular control easier by centralizing definitely authority and responsibility. A complicated system of local government, such as we now have, immensely increases the difficulty of securing a government properly responsive to the popular will. It is both unbusinesslike and undemocratic.

EXPECT A BIG REGISTRATION

Opportunity Tomorrow to Qualify for Charter Election.

50,000 NOT ON POLL LISTS.

Law Requires Registration Every Two Years and Many Names Wiped Off.

Tomorrow is the only day of registration for the special charter election Sept. 17. Not only is the charter to be voted on next month but also an amendment to the Municipal courts act, and the citizen who is not registered now or who does not register tomorrow cannot vote on either proposition.

The politicians are figuring that there are now 50,000 unregistered votes in Chicago. This may be inside the number if only the persons who are entitled to vote and whose names are not yet on the registry books are considered, but that there are that number of citizens who are in the habit of voting at practically every election and who are not now qualified is not believed.

Movers and "Leap Year" Voters.

Unregistered voters at an election like next month's belong to two classes—those who move frequently and are consequently forced to register for every election, and those wo never take the trouble to qualify to vote except at a presidential election. As a rule the democrats suffer most by a failure to register from the first class and the republicans from similar inaction by the second; consequently both parties are doing their best to get as full a registration tomorrow as possible, each claiming that the larger the number of voters turned out the better for its chances at the election.

This time the persons who go to the polls only at presidential elections, "leap year" voters, as they are called by the politicians, have to be taken into account. A large number of them probably do not know it, but if they failed to register anew for the congressional election last fall their names are not now on the registry books. The fact that they have not moved since 1904 makes no difference. There is a new registration every two years, and all old names are wiped off. These persons must register tomorrow if they expect to vote on the charter. The movers also will have to register. Those who are not now living where they voted last spring will have to get their names on the polling books.

No Basis for Predictions.

The men accustomed to base election predictions on registration figures are at sea as to what a heavy or a light registration tomorrow would indicate. It, of course, goes without saying that a heavy registration would mean an extraordinary interest in the result, and in a general way it is conceded that the greater the interest the better the chances for the charter. However, while the democratic party is opposing the charter and the republicans advocating it, it has been found impossible to draw party lines closely in the contest and the old time ward figures will not be as much of a guide as they have been heretofore.

COUPLE DEAD; WIFE BLAMED

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jacobson Asphyxiated in Their Home.

MAN A STRIKING PRINTER.

Police Think Woman Turned On Gas After He Had Retired.

In the deaths of Charles Jacobson, 49 years old, and his wife, Matilda, 48 years old, who were found dead from gas asphyxiation in their bed at their home, 565 West Erie street, at 11 o'clock last night, the police of the West Chicago avenue station believe they have a murder and suicide mystery.

The man was undressed, while the woman was attired in a wrapper. The police believe this supports their theory of suicide and murder. It is their opinion that the woman was the last one up and that she turned on the gas while her husband slept, after which she lay down on the bed and awaited the end.

Despondency the Cause.

Despondency on the part of both over the enforced idleness of the husband, who was a striking printer, is believed to have been the motive for the double crime. Jacobson has not worked since the typographical strike of two years ago, and when the funds of the strikers was stopped a year ago both are said by neighbors and friends to have become downhearted.

The bodies were discovered by their son-in-law, Frank Wilson, 480 West Huron street, as a result of a premonition that all was not well on the part of his wife, the daughter of the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson had been going to the home of their daughter and son-in-law for Sunday dinner for several months, with the exception of yesterday. When they did not appear, and no word had been received from them up to a late hour, Mrs. Wilson asked her husband to go to their home and learn the cause.

When the latter found the house dark and all the doors locked he battered in the kitchen door and he was almost knocked down by the odor of escaping gas. After allowing the gas to escape he cautiously made his way into the room and traced the flow to the bedroom occupied by his wife's parents.

Bodies Found in Bed.

He managed to turn off both jets in the room and after the room had been cleared sufficiently of the gas he discovered the bodies of his relatives lying on the bed.

A search of the house for any possible clew to the motive was made, but no letters or notes of any kind that would throw light on it were found.

He will leave for Australia in about a month. Dr. Mead lost an arm in a street car accident in Washington a few years ago.

UNWRITTEN LAW HER PLEA.

Mrs. Angelo Coniglio, Arrested, Admits Killing Defamer.

LOOKS FOR AN ACQUITTAL.

Police Find Slayer of Filippe Ferreo at Home of Friends.

The story of a woman's revenge on a man who had defamed her character to her husband and friends was told by a frail little Italian woman in the Hudson avenue police station last night to Inspector Revere.

The woman, Mrs. Angelo Coniglio, 24 years old, 143 Gault court, had just been taken into custody by Lieut. Ambrose and Sergt. Hannigan of the Chicago avenue station after a week's search following the mysterious murder of Filippe Ferreo, 30 years old, who lived next door at 141 Gault court.

The woman became hysterical at the police station and later in the evening at the Hudson avenue station's matron department she told her story between sobs.

Woman Admits Killing Man.

"Yes, I killed Ferreo," said Mrs. Coniglio. "I had planned the murder for two weeks and shot at him once before without hitting him. I had to kill him to defend my honor.

"Ferreo wanted me to leave my husband and elope with him. When I refused he began telling false stories to my husband, and I believe I was justified in killing him. My husband beat me several times after he was told the stories and he told me I would either have to kill Ferreo or he would kill me.

"I bought a revolver, which I concealed in the folds of my dress, and watched and waited for Ferreo. After I shot at him the first time he did not appear at his rooming house for another week. This was the Sunday that I killed him. I saw him entering the yard from the alley, and, telling him that I wanted to speak to him, I drew near and shot him.

"Somebody who knew where I was stopping told the police, or they would never have arrested me. I am not angry at my betrayer, however, for I know that I will be acquitted of the murder when I am arraigned for trial. It was a woman's honor against an unprincipled man."

Shooting Mystifies Police.

Ferreo was found dying in a runway in the rear of his home with a bullet in his forehead at 5 o'clock Sunday, Aug. 18. He died several hours later without regaining consciousness.

All the available detectives of the city were placed on the case and suspicion was directed at Mrs. Coniglio. Lieut. Ambrose and Sergt. Hannigan, working together, received word that the woman was living in the vicinity of Wicker Park, at the home of friends. This led to her arrest.

WOMAN KILLS A LANDLORD.

Wife of Tenant Shoots Aged Man After He Had Fired at Her Three Times.

Mount Sterling, Ky., Aug. 25.—Algin Thomas, 70 years old, was shot and killed today by Mrs. Kate Brumet, the 20 year old wife of Abe Brumet. The Brumets were tenants of Thomas and the men had a disagreement. Today while Brumet was away from home Thomas shot at his wife three times, one bullet grazing her head. She ran and secured a revolver, firing at Thomas five times, one bullet piercing the brain, killing him instantly.

HOLDUP IN WILD WEST STYLE

Highwaymen Armed with Shotguns Make Buggy Halt.

ESCAPE IN OWN CARRIAGE.

Peter Trimiter and His Wife Are Robbed of $20 and a Gold Watch.

A highway holdup of the western stage coach type occurred on the outskirts of Chicago at 8 o'clock last night at North Western and Devon avenues. Three highwaymen armed with shotguns held up and robbed Peter Trimiter, a farmer at 256 Devon avenue, and his wife as they were returning to their home in a buggy. The robbers made their escape in their own buggy, which they had secreted in the underbrush near the roadway.

Trimiter, after watching the escape of the highwaymen, notified the police of the Rogers Park station. A squad in a patrol wagon searched the entire neighborhood for hours without result.

The scene of the robbery is the northern limits of the city and one of the most lonely spots in the city. The only inhabitants for miles in either direction are truck farmers.

Robber Seized the Reins.

Trimiter was driving south on North Western avenue and was just about to turn into Devon avenue to his home, when he was startled by the gruff command, "Halt and throw up your hands." Almost before he could draw the reins to comply a man sprang out of the underbrush and caught the lines.

Two others appeared at either side of the buggy, and while one of them kept watch in the roadway the other compelled Trimiter and his wife to dismount. Then, with Trimiter's hands still raised above his head, the robber went through the farmer's pockets, taking $20 and a gold watch and chain, valued at $50.

The robbers made no attempt to search Mrs. Trimiter, who stood alongside her husband with her hands raised also.

"Get back into the buggy," commanded the robber who had given the first order to stop, "and don't attempt to pursue us at the peril of your life."

Trio Flee in Buggy.

The three bandits then dashed into the underbrush from which they had come, and in a few seconds Trimiter and his wife heard the words, "Drive her as fast as she can go."

The brush parted and a buggy with the three men shot into the roadway, started north on North Western avenue, and was soon lost to sight.

Captured After Running Fight.

In a running revolver fight, during which nearly a dozen shots were exchanged, police of the Attrill street station yesterday afternoon captured Charles Clark, alias Kelly, 28 years old, a former convict, who had been detected robbing the flat of C. A. Paullson, 1379 North Spaulding avenue. The police pursued in a patrol wagon.

CLOTHES TAKEN BY ROBBER; DODGES IN WEEDS FOR HOURS.

Striking Telegrapher Loses $13, but That Isn't Half His Troubles—Hides from Throng of Pleasure Seekers.

To be robbed of $13 is some misfortune, especially when you are a striking telegraph operator, but that isn't the worst. Think of being stripped of your hat, coat, and trousers on the lake shore and having to spend several hours dodging Sunday pleasure seekers before you can find a place of refuge.

James E. Reeves, a striking telegrapher from New York, experienced both these misfortunes yesterday afternoon. After several drinks with a new found friend at the Revere house he was induced to go to see the "hole on the lake front." When he reached the foot of Illinois street he was knocked down, beaten, and robbed of the $13, the coat, the hat, and the trousers.

For nearly five hours Reeves dodged around among the weeds in "Streeterville." Finally in desperation he made a dash for the fire engine house in Chicago avenue, where he told his story, and one of the firemen gave him a blanket.

LOW RATES NEAR FOR KANSAS.

State Railway Commissioner Says Body Can Order Emergency Two Cent Fare Immediately.

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 25.—It may not be necessary for the state board of railroad commissioners to take much time before ordering in an emergency passenger rate of 2 cents per mile. George W. Kanavel, chairman of the board, said today that all that would be necessary would be for the members to meet and decide on the advisability of declaring an emergency and putting the 2 cent rate into effect at once.

If this position is right, Kansas may have a 2 cent rate within a few days. The board on Tuesday will have its first regular meeting since the governor gave out his letter threatening to call a special session of the legislature to have a 2 cent law enacted unless the board acted at once.

Should the railroads decide not to put the rate into effect a legal fight will be precipitated. State officials believe the railroads will not make a fight.

Imports from Island to United States Make Up Practically Two-thirds of the Total Sum.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Trade of the United States with Cuba in the fiscal year just ended aggregated almost $150,000,000. The value of the imports from Cuba in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, was $97,441,690, and of the exports thereto $49,305,274.

In both imports and exports the trade with Cuba in 1907 exceeded that of any previous year. The largest imports from the island in any previous year were those of 1905, when they aggregated a little over $86,000,000.

The largest exports to the island prior to 1907 were those of 1906, when they aggregated $47,750,000.

CAPTURE SLAYERS AFTER LONG CHASE

Armenians Wanted for Murder in New York Located in Bulgarian Town.

MEN KNOWN IN CHICAGO.

Flight to Europe After Killing Priest Three Months Ago Proves Futile.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—A cable message received at police headquarters today announced that one of three men wanted for the murder here in May of Father Kasper Vartaman, the Armenian priest, has been located at Voma, Bulgaria, after a world wide chase.

The murder of Father Kasper was one of the most baffling crimes the New York police ever tackled. On May 1 two Armenians rented a room in the house occupied by Mrs. Annie Sherrer, at 333 West Thirty-seventh street. They carried one valise. In a week Mrs. Sherrer knew them as "Paul" and "John" and noticed a visitor, whom she called a priest. He was about 70 years old, bent a little with age, and his long, dark beard was streaked with gray.

The priest appeared to be on affectionate terms with Paul and John. He slept three nights at various times on a lounge in the small room adjoining the room occupied by the lodgers.

Slain and Packed in Trunk.

The priest called on May 22 during the afternoon. Mrs. Sherrer saw him go into the room of Paul and John. No human eye ever saw the priest come out again. At 2 p. m. that afternoon Paul and John informed Mrs. Sherrer a man was coming with a trunk for them. At 2:30 two men carried a trunk from an express wagon to the room upstairs. At 4 p. m. Mrs. Sherrer asked John to pay her $3 due that day. Paul pleaded poverty. He would leave the trunk for security.

On Sunday, May 26, Mrs. Sherrer, her husband, and Policeman Henry Rodo broke open the trunk. Within doubled up like a jackknife was the body of an old man. The body was lifted from the trunk. Under it was an empty silk money bag and a meal ticket with the name of S. Ermoyian Bros. restaurant, and the address "1202 Halsted street, West Pullman, Chicago." On the inside of the trunk's cover was the name of Paul Sarkisian, and above this in Armenian script was the name of "Sarkis Ermoyian." Books, letters, and papers taken from the trunk and found in a closet belonged to Ermoyian.

Then came the identification of the body as that of Father Kaspar Vartanian, an itinerant priest. The trunk was traced to 506 Tenth avenue, where Sarkis Ermoyian had roomed. The police soon learned the names of three men, Sarkis Ermoyian, Paul Sarkisian, and John Mouradian. An "alarm" circular was issued.

Murderers Make Easy Escape.

The escape of the men wanted was the matter of ease and comfort. For a week after the murder the trio remained in the vicinity of New York. Ermoyian and Mouradian on May 29 went to Montreal, Canada, by way of the New York Central. At 3 a. m. May 31, the steamship, Ionian, of the Allan line sailed from Montreal for Liverpool. The night it sailed Ermoyian and Mouradian had gone aboard as steerage passengers.

Paul Sarkisian remained in New York for a full week after the discovery of Father Kasper's body. Then he, too, took the Montreal route to freedom, sailing on the Virginian of the Allan line June 7.

Eymoyian and Mouradian landed in Liverpool June 9 and after stopping in London two days proceeded to Marseilles, France, where about June 19 they registered under their own names at Gazar's hotel, No. 40 Rue Belzone. The cabled description of Ermoyian and Mouradian sent by the New York department to the French police apparently was of no avail.

French Police Let Them Slip.

Steamships arriving at French ports were supposed to have been met by the French police, acting under instructions from New York, but George Kurkian, a young Armenian, from New York, registered at the Hotel du Cheval in Marseilles without being disturbed by the police.

Both Sarkis Ermoyian and John Mouradian remained in hiding in Marseilles until they were joined by Paul Sarkisian, who followed them a week later from America. After the discovery of Ermoyian and Mouradian by George Kurkian, in Marseilles, both fugitives were careful not to frequent the Hotel Gazar.

It is known that about this time Sarkis Ermoyian wrote a postal card from Marseilles to his New York cousin, Sahag Ermeyian, telling him that he needed money badly and wanted him to send $100. This letter was sent to Chicago, and from Chicago was forwarded to New York, because Sahag is now living in this city. The cousin, after getting this card, went to Harpoottian, 54 Union square, an Armenian dealer in foreign exchange, and bought a check for $100 to send to his cousin.

When the check reached Marseilles Sarkis Ermoyian had left for Varna, so the money was returned.

News has been received here within the last few days of the arrival at Verna of Ermoyian and Mouradian, and it is presumed that Sarkisian joined them.

The three men, Sarkis Ermoyian, John Mouradian, and Paul Sarkisian, were formerly in business in Chicago.

PEACE IS SOUGHT BY THE STRIKERS

Telegraphers Will Elect Committee Which Will Attempt to Settle the Dispute.

STILL THE WAR GOES ON.

Appeals Made to 10,000 Operators in Small Towns to Desert Their Keys.

The leaders of the telegraph strike yesterday opened the way to peace negotiations with the telegraph companies by ordering the election of a "peace" committee of fifteen. Voting will be in progress today in every center where the operators are on strike. It is expected the committee will be ready for business about the time President Small makes his efforts to reach the heads of the telegraph companies in New York.

Secretary Russell said the strike can be settled quickly if the companies will agree to meet the committee. Some of the union officials seemed to be confident that such a meeting will be arranged within a few days.

"It is not a difficult matter to settle our troubles with the telegraph companies," said Secretary Russell. "All we ask is that the companies receive the committee and discuss the situation."

While Secretary Russell did not say so, it is understood that the "peace" committee would act as representatives of the striking employés and not as a delegation from the union.

Puzzle to Company Managers.

The action of the operators was puzzling to the local telegraph managers. They declared they had heard of no changes in the strike situation which would warrant the selection of such a committee. They thought the move was simply of a conciliatory nature.

That the operators are weakening was firmly denied by Secretary Russell, who declared preparations now are under way for spreading the strike. Russell asserted that an aggressive campaign to win over strikebreakers also will be started this morning all over the country. Local unions in each city have received orders to appoint special "squadrons" of strikers, whose duty it will be to attempt to close up or cripple offices which are now struggling along under difficulties.

Ten thousand appeals were sent out during the day to operators in small towns who are still at their keys, inviting them to join the strike. Heretofore, the strike leaders have made no effort to interfere with telegraph business in towns where only one or two operators are employed. The new move is intended to cripple the companies in out of the way places.

Another feature of the guerrilla warfare which the strike leaders are mapping out pertains to the "ticker" stock quotation service. It is said the brokers, in whose offices "tickers" are operating, will be required to remove them. Western Union clocks also are to come under the union ban.

Big Meeting in Brand's Hall.

The speakers at the massmeeting in Brand's hall in the afternoon talked along aggressive lines. The meeting was one of the most largely attended since the strike began. Nearly one-third of the audience was composed of women strikers and their friends.

"I am just as confident that we will win as I was two weeks ago," Secretary Russell told the operators. "I believe we have the business men of the country with us in this fight and that, if necessary, we can get financial aid from them."

Russell said the strike had changed from the vacation to the fighting stage and that the coming week would prove to be the most severe test of the struggle.

"The telegraphers will stay out two months to win this strike," declared S. J. Konenkamp of the national executive board. "I understand Vice President Nally of the Postal gave us two weeks. The time is up and we are still standing firm. Mr. Nally probably will extend the time limit now."

H. J. Easton of Omaha and W. J. Rutter of the Buffalo union also addressed the strikers and reported that conditions in those cities were favorable to the telegraphers. Money contributions from other unions were said to be coming in fast by Frank Likes, who read the names of a number of labor organizations that already have made donations to the operators.

END NEAR, SMALL SAYS.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—When Sylvester J. Small, president of the Commercial Telegraphers' union, reached this city this morning he was met at the train by a committee of five men and six women strikers and taken outside, where there was a larger committee of about 150, many of whom were women, who escorted him to Everett hall, in East Fourth street.

There a meeting of telegraph check boys and messenger boys was in full blast and he was invited to address them. After a five minutes' address, he went to the Astor house, and at 4 o'clock went back to Everett hall, where there was an open massmeeting of the strikers.

As soon as he appeared the strikers made demonstrations of welcome, the men got up on chairs, cheering and throwing up their hats, while the women waved their handkerchiefs. When Mr. Small began to speak he was received with another demonstration.

Calls Strike a Revolution.

"New York has always led the way, whether it was in organizing a campaign or a strike," he said. "In coming through the country to New York I have sometimes found it hard to realize that from 15,000 to 20,000 telegraphers are on strike, and that the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies are deprived of 95 per cent of their best operators. This is an uprising, a revolution.

"The reason for this strike is that the Wetsern Union and Postal companies persecuted the telegraphers for so many years that they could stand it no longer. After the agreement was made it was broken by the companies within three hours by the discharge of four or five operators belonging to the union on the sayso of an unfair woman. We had been thirty days working with scabs, and the discharge of our men was too much. We took the case in our own hands, and our people walked out.

"It was the culmination of twenty-four years of indignation. Not 2 per cent of the 95 per cent who went on strike would return except on their own terms.

Peace to Come Within Week.

"According to some of the newspapers, my coming to New York means arbitration in a few days. There may be arbitration, but it would need to be of the right kind. I have received a telegram from San Francisco since I came here, stating that the telegraphers wanted eight hours and more pay and no arbitration."

Later in the day the following statement was issued by National President Small at the Astor house after a conference with the local leaders:

"It looks to me after attending the meeting at Everett hall this afternoon that it will be all over but the shouting within a week. The telegraph companies cannot possibly hold out much longer unless the business of the country can dispense with the telegraph entirely. We have fully 95 per cent of all the commercial telegraphers in the United States on strike.

"Much has been published about arbitration lately. The cry from coast to coast is 'No arbitration.' We know to a man how many telegraphers the two companies have at work in the various cities and we also know how many are on strike."

Mr. Small was asked if President Roosevelt would likely intervene. He replied that he did not think he would bring the employers and the strikers together as in the coal strike, because there was a coal famine at the time and people could do better without telegrams than coal.

Will Wed Municipal Court Judge.

CUPID NABS ANOTHER JUDGE

Grabs Magistrate Crowe from the Bench and Gives Life Sentence.

PROVES HYMEN IS SUPREME.

Captures Four Municipal Jurists Within Only Two Months.

Four marriages within two months, which have depleted the ranks of Chicago's bachelor municipal judges, have caused a feeling of apprehension among the few remaining exponents of the single state, and have led them to wonder whether the tall building at 148 Michigan avenue, which is the abode of the Municipal court, has been invaded by that prince of jokers, Dan Cupid. They are wondering also who will be the next victim of his shafts.

The spirit of romance and matrimony seems to pervade the air and to transform the somber courts and chambers into potential settings for romances.

The four who so recently have deserted the ranks of bachelordom for the benedict state are Municipal Judges Charles N. Goodnow, William N. Cottrell, William W. Maxwell, and Frank Crowe. Judge Goodnow was the first to establish the precedent of which his fellow judges have so quickly availed themselves. Several months ago he admitted that he had been taken prisoner by a higher authority than himself and that he expected the extreme sentence. The expectations were well founded, for on July 10 he appeared before Cupid's bar and received the "life sentence" of matrimonial experience with Miss Florence Dennison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dennison, 4844 Evans avenue.

Cottrell and Maxwell Follow.

The sentence of Judge Goodnow worked inversely as court sentences are designed. It did not in any way discourage other fellow jurists from following his example. Scarcely three weeks had passed when Judge Cottrell blushingly announced that he, too, had succumbed to the same ailment and a speedy cure would be sought. But the amusement and jokes at the expense of the institutors of the new municipal judges' benedict club changed to consternation when Judge W. W. Maxwell passed around the word that he, too, would undergo the extreme penalty. The partner to whom Judge Maxwell was assigned was Mrs. Elizabeth Beckley of South Haven, Mich., and the wedding took place last Saturday afternoon at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Chicago.

Now Comes Judge Crowe.

The final blow to the hopes of the bachelor judges that the epidemic would cease with the third victim and that it was a case of "one, two, three, and out," was received when Judge Frank Crowe announced that he, too, had succumbed to Cupid by becoming the husband of Mrs. Mary Doheny of Peoria, Ill. They will be married Wednesday morning at St. Mary's cathedral in Peoria and immediately thereafter the judge and his bride will depart for a trip through Yellowstone park. Miss Margaret Sullivan, 1044 West Garfield boulevard, will be maid of honor and James A. Lamon of Chicago will be best man at the wedding. Upon their return Judge and Mrs. Crowe will be at home at 865 West Congress street.

Several More Bachelors.

For the next few weeks the Municipal courts' building will be constantly under suspicion, until it is known whether the epidemic has run its course. There are still several bachelors among the judges, and one of the newly made benedicts declared last night that he had it as a straight tip from Dan Cupid that he would haunt the building and let fly his shafts until the last unmarried jurist has seen the error of his ways and publicly announced his determination to make the only acceptable atonement.

POLICEMAN RIDDLED BY SHOT

Wounded in 100 Places by Men He Is Marching to Station.

CAR THIEVES RESIST ARREST

Gun Used by One of Trio Nabbed Beside Illinois Central Tracks.

When trying to march three freight car robbers to the Kensington police station, Patrolman Edward H. Brink was seriously wounded at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning, receiving more than a hundred wounds from a shotgun discharged by one of the trio. Covered with blood, he dragged himself to the station, more than a mile away. The three men escaped.

Brink had cornered the three men in a ditch beside a freight car on the Illinois Central tracks at One Hundred and Twenty-third street. He was traveling his beat when he heard the voices of the men behind a train of cars and began an investigation. Before he could reach the track on which the cars stood he was intercepted by a passing freight train, and after waiting for that to pass he found that the men whose voices he had heard had slipped away.

Finds Box Car Plundered.

He began a search among the cars and discovered one of them, containing boxes of dry goods, with the door pried open and several of the boxes broken into. He climbed on top of the car and, looking about him, discovered three men hiding in the ditch parallel to the tracks. Each of the men carried a sack containing goods which Brink concluded had been stolen from the car.

The policeman descended to the ground and commanded the men to come out of the ditch. They did so and he ordered them to walk in front of him to the station, when without warning the first of the three men wheeled about. He raised a shotgun, which he had carried partly concealed under his coat, and fired both barrels at the policeman.

As Brink fell the men turned and ran down the tracks in the direction of Dolton.

After reaching the station the policeman was taken to the home of relatives at 848 Erickson avenue, Pullman.

Suspects Not Identified.

A score of policemen were detailed to search for the men, who were described as Italians by Brink, and ten suspects were locked up at the police station, but none was identified when taken before the wounded policeman.

Brink is 23 years old and lives at 10408 Cottage Grove avenue.

GALLANT REAR ADMIRAL EVANS CARRIES BUNDLES FOR WOMAN

Looked as Though She Asked Him to Carry Baby Ashore but Let Him Lug Packages Instead.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Evans, commanding the North Atlantic fleet, now at anchor in Hampton roads between Old Point Comfort and the Jamestown exposition grounds, had his gallantry tested on his arrival at Old Point from New York today. Standing beside him on the deck as the steamer approached the wharf were two good looking women, incumbered with a baby, handbags, and packages. One touched the admiral on the shoulder and asked him if he was going to get off the boat at the wharf.

"Yes, madam. What can I do for you?" asked the admiral.

"Would you mind helping us off with our things? We have more than we can carry."

"Certainly, madam. Only too pleased," was the quick reply.

The woman did not give the commander-in-chief her baby to carry, but a good big dress suit case and a package.

NELSON MORRIS MAKES RALLY.

Founder of Big Packing Business, However, Said to Be in Critical Condition.

Nelson Morris, founder of the packing business which bears his name, is in a critical condition at his home, 2458 Indiana avenue. For over a year he has been suffering with heart disease, and during the last four days he had been confined to his bed. Yesterday, however, there was a slight change for the better and his physician, Dr. Arthur Edwards, said there was reason to hope this improvement would continue. Owing to the nature of his disease improvement, if there is any, will of necessity be slow.

Stabbing at a Reception.

Henry Suhr, a grocer of Lemont, Ill., is under arrest there pending the outcome of injuries suffered by Fred Weck, son of a wealthy farmer, who was stabbed by Suhr Saturday night, when Weck was at a reception at Suhr's farm. Some say the stabbing was accidental, others the result of an argument.

If not, you owe it as a duty to yourself to insist on getting what you ask for when you try to buy an advertised article.

READY TO STRIKE AT STOCK YARDS.

Delivery Teamsters Threaten to Walk Out Today Unless Wages Are Raised.

QUICK ACTION IS TAKEN.

Ultimatum Is Given to Packers After Their Offer Is Turned Down.

The packing house teamsters are once more in a strike mood, and have given the packers until 5:30 o'clock this afternoon to comply with their demands. Unless they gain their point 700 of the drivers are ready to abandon their wagons and tie up the meat delivery business of the whole city.

The seriousness of the situation became apparent yesterday when it was learned that the packers, hoping to avoid a strike, had held out an offer of a small increase in wages to some of the men. This offer was rejected at a meeting of the teamsters in the afternoon. The sentiment at the meeting was that unless every driver gets an increase a strike should be called.

Two months ago the packing house men were on the point of striking. A strike vote was taken and the walkout was indorsed by the teamsters' joint council and the international executive board of the teamsters' union. At the last moment the strike was prevented by a proffer of arbitration from the packers, which the drivers accepted.

Arbitration, however, proved to be a failure. Four members of an arbitration board—two representing each side in the controversy—were selected, but it was found impossible to agree on the fifth man. The effort to complete the board was kept up until a week ago, when the teamsters announced that they were "tired" of the proceedings and renewed their demands for more wages.

Th following proposal, carrying advances in pay for two classes of drivers—about 60 per cent of the total number—finally was delivered by the packers:

City delivery drivers' wages to be increased from 21 and 23¾ cents an hour to 22½ and 25 cents.

Drivers of "branch house" wagons to receive advances of $1 a week.

The teamsters who drive the "tip" carts, the transfer wagons, and the men who guide the big three, four, and six horse team wagons through the city streets were left out in the packers' offer.

The packers handed their proposal, which they declared to be a final offer, to George F. Golden, business agent of the union, last Saturday afternoon. The scale was not satisfactory either to Golden or the committee which had been negotiating with their employers, but it was decided to call a special meeting. The offer was then rejected.

Ultimatum to the Packers.

Long waiting for a settlement of their dispute put the teamsters into a hostile frame of mind and there were loud demands at the meeting for immediate action. The ultimatum, accordingly, was drafted and delivered in the afternoon to each of the big packing firms.

Business Agent Golden said last night that it would not be necessary to go through the usual formality in calling out the men, because the strike already has received the indorsement of the higher councils of the teamsters' union. He said he will call a special meeting of the drivers tonight, however, to report the answer of the packers to the men and decide whether a walkout shall be ordered. The meeting will be held at Forty-seventh street and Princeton avenue.

NO PIE; MESSENGERS STRIKE.

Pittsburg Boys Walk Out When Pastry Is Cut Off Fare Given at Office.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Because the Western Union Telegraph company cut pie off the bill of fare at the dining room run for the strikebreakers and others in the downtown office, all the messenger boys struck, declaring "no pie, no work."

They managed to tie up the delivery business pretty well today.

Some time ago, when the boys struck for 3 cents a message, the telegraph company quickly broke the strike by offering the lads three square meals a day in the eating rooms. There was pie on the bill of fare then, but yesterday the pie was cut off, and then an open revolt came.

MAN INJURED BY GOLF BALL OFFERS TO MAKE ODD WAGER.

Willing to Bet He Is a Better Player than the One Who Marred His Countenance.

F. W. Millington, 6106 Ellis avenue, still has considerable "sporting blood" left despite the fact that he recently lost seven teeth and suffered a badly cut countenance by coming in unexpected contact with a flying golf ball on the Jackson Park links.

Mr. Millington desires to wager his "right to bring suit for damages" against any old thing of equivalent value that Dr. George M. Shidler, an interne of the St. Luke's hospital, will put up, that he can beat the latter in a game of golf, and that the doctor can't play the course in less than 100 strokes—the "dub dead line."

Dr. Shidler was the man behind the ball which was stopped by Mr. Millington's face. When informed last evening of Mr. Millington's offer, he said:

"If I could make the course in fifty strokes I certainly would not accept the challenge. As far as suing for damages—Mr. Millington is at liberty to do so. I don't claim to be any crack golf player, but I do say that Millington has not acted the part of a gentleman. I offered to take him to the hospital, sew up the gashes, and pay for having his teeth fixed, but he preferred the consolation of cussing me."

ESCAPED CONVICT PARDONED THIRTY YEARS AFTER FLIGHT.

William Pearson, Sentenced to Alabama Penitentiary for Stealing $2 Pig, Grows Rich in Texas.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—William Pearson, who escaped from the Alabama penitentiary thirty years ago, while serving sentence for stealing a pig, and fled to Texas, locating at Palestine, where he has become a man of prominence and influence, has been pardoned by Gov. Comer.

The petition for his pardon was made by Gov. Campbell and Congressman Gregg of Texas, who say that Pearson is a leading and wealthy citizen of Palestine and that he and his wife and children stand high socially. The petition states Pearson has frequently refused political office because he knew he could not legally hold it.

Gov. Comer had the case looked up and found Pearson had been convicted in 1876 in Clay county, which he was 18 years old, of stealing a pig valued at $2 and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. After serving two months Pearson escaped by knocking down a guard, and nothing was heard of him till the petition came from the Texas governor.

DIES MARTYR TO MEDICINE

New Yorker Succumbs After Experiment on Self with Poison.

TESTS WITH CARBOLIC ACID.

Dr. S. D. Powell, Long Known as Authority on Scientific Methods.

Greenwich, Conn., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—In an effort to demonstrate that alcohol was an antidote to carbolic acid, Dr. Seneca D. Powell of New York and this village, frequently swallowed what would have been a fatal dose of the poison and then took alcohol. Many of the doctor's experiments were made in the presence of classes at the New York Post-Graduate Medical school.

Dr. Powell died today at his home on North street, here, and it is believed that his experiments with the acid were the direct cause of death. He had been in bad health for three years, but his illness took a more serious turn two weeks ago.

Demonstrates His Belief.

It was in 1899 that he announced to the medical profession his belief in the efficacy of alcohol as an antidote in cases of carbolic acid poisoning. He demonstrated at that time before the Medical Society of the County of New York that clear carbolic acid could be rubbed on the hands freely and allowed to remain for several seconds without injury to the skin, if alcohol were then applied. He reported at that time that he had seen three persons saved who had taken carbolic acid.

Lecturer of Authority.

Dr. Powell was vice president of the pan-American medical congress in 1895 and vice president of the New York State Medical society in 1898. At the time of his death he was secretary of the faculty at the Post-Graduate Medical school and its senior professor of surgery. He was a lecturer and writer of authority on several specialties, including brain surgery and the treatment of infected wounds.

Dr. Powell was 60 years old. His widow and twin daughters, Emily and Isabelle, survive him. The funeral will take place on Tuesday, probably at St. Mary's Catholic church.

Among the hurt are D. D. Sturgis, Chicago; Alice S. Coleman, Ann Arbor, Mich.; S. C. Greiner, Evansville, Ind.

THEATER TRUST EVICTS OWNER

Revolvers Are Flourished in Forcible Seizure of Lyric House in Buffalo, N. Y.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Representatives of Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts took forcible possession of the Lyric theater here Sunday morning after a fight in which revolvers were flourished, and John Laughlin, who for ten years has been fighting what is known as the "theatrical trust," was forcibly ejected from the playhouse.

After ejecting Laughlin and the attendants the doors were barricaded, locks changed, and a guard placed at all the entrances.

The invaders claim they have signed contracts from Mr. Laughlin which give them lawful possession of the place for the next eight years. Mr. Laughlin avers that the terms of the contracts have not been fulfilled by Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts, and says he will fight in the courts for possession of his theater.

NABS A CHURCH COLLECTION

Woman Grabs Contribution Envelopes and Escapes.

SHOCK TO THE WORSHIPERS.

Mrs. Warren Furbeck Thinks She Encountered the Thief Before.

Several envelopes containing contributions were stolen from a collection plate in the First Congregational church of Oak Park yesterday morning by a woman apparently 35 years old, who immediately fled from the church and disappeared. It is believed she is the woman who attempted to enter the residence of Warren F. Furbeck, 440 Lake street, Oak Park, a week ago.

She was dressed entirely in black and occupied a seat in a front pew. So far as has been learned no one in the congregation knew her. At the close of the services the plates containing the Sunday's contributions were placed in front of the pulpit. The Rev. W. W. Newell, secretary of the Illinois Home Missionary society, preached in the absence of the regular pastor, the Rev. W. E. Barton, who is on a vacation.

Eludes Vigilance of Usher.

Mr. Newell was standing near the plates when the woman approached. He paid no particular attention to her movements, believing she was making for the side door, through which some of the other worshipers were passing. As he continued his conversation with Warren F. Furbeck and Miss Anna Beard, the woman leaned over the pulpit railing and took several envelopes containing money. D. D. Garcelon, head usher at the church, saw the theft and followed the woman to the door. He placed his hand lightly on her shoulder and said:

"I beg your pardon, but——"

Before he had finished the sentence the woman shoved him aside and ran from the church and disappeared in the throng.

Recognized by Mrs. Furbeck.

Mrs. Warren F. Furbeck said she believes the woman who committed the robbery in the church is the one who attempted to force an entrance into her residence.

"This same woman," Mrs. Furbeck said, "wearing black clothes and a heavy veil, appealed to me for clothing for a boy she said was at her home. I considered her request and gave her some clothing. Then she attempted to force her way into my house. I called assistance and when a servant appeared the woman dropped the bundle of clothing and fled."

TRACES LETTER FROM WIFE; TAKES FORMER BANK CASHIER

Man Who Caused Failure of Iowa Institution Found Living Under Assumed Name.

Kansas City, Mo, Aug. 25.—W. A. Farren, alias N. D. W. Adams, former cashier of the Farmers' bank of Clearfield, Ia, was arrested here today on the charge of embezzling the school funds of Taylor, Ia., on deposit in the bank, causing the institution to fail.

Farren was located through the aid of an insurance company, which insisted upon his signature to a document to legalize a policy on his life. His wife at Leon, Ia., acting for the insurance company, addressed a letter to "Adams" here and the sheriff of Taylor county came on the same train with the letter.

Farren admitted his identity and without protest started for Iowa tonight with the sheriff.

The Clearfield bank closed its doors on June 26, 1906, six months after Farren had given up the position as cashier. The bank failed for more than $33,000.

For a time the Iowa officers traced the fugitive, but after a few months he managed to baffle all efforts to locate him. Under the name of Adams he has been working here as the janitor of a large office building.

LAGOON GIVES UP ITS DEAD; MURDER MYSTERY DEVELOPS.

Unidentified Body Found in Jackson Park Shows Indications of Foul Play, and Police Are Puzzled.

An unidentified body, apparently that of a workingman, was found floating in the lagoon in Jackson park early yesterday morning under circumstances which led the police to think a murder may have been committed. A large swelling on the right temple pointed to a possibly violent death.

The body was discovered by South Park Policeman H. C. Abbott, who saw it floating under some willows on the east shore of the lagoon. A handkerchief bearing the initial "D" in one corner, three pennies, a pocket knife, a pipe and some tobacco were found in the pockets of the man's clothing.

The body was that of a man 55 years old, 5 feet 5 inches in height, weighing 160 pounds, with a light complexion, light hair, and a sandy beard. A search of the police records failed to disclose anyone missing who would answer to the description.

TWO NEAR DEATH IN LOVE TRAGEDY

Desperate Wooer Shoots and Dangerously Wounds Woman Who Repulsed Him.

TRIES TO KILL SELF, TOO.

After Arrest He Expresses No Regret for Attempted Murder and Suicide.

When to Hattie Metecki, 20 years old, 8824 Muskegon avenue, was given the choice of death at the hand of her suitor or marriage to him, she declined matrimony. She now lies in South Chicago hospital dangerously injured with a bullet wound just above the heart.

In an adjoining ward of the hospital Louis Sattler, 9506 Commercial avenue, 25 years old, occupies a cot. His left eye is blown out and there is a dangerous wound in his forehead. After shooting down the object of his distorted affection, Sattler fired a bullet into his own brain. His wounds are not considered necessarily fatal.

This ending to Sattler's five years' courtship of Miss Metecki came early yesterday afternoon. As had been his custom for the last five years, Sattler went over to spend the afternoon with his sweetheart. The fact that she did not show the same warmth as of years gone by had kindled a rage of jealousy in his heart. He carried a revolver in his pocket. On two previous occasions Miss Metecki had declined his offers of marriage.

Prefers Death to Wedlock.

The two were seated on the sofa in the parlor when again the impetuous youth proposed. He evidently perceived his wooing had been futile, for before the girl had time to respond, he said:

"Hattie, you will either marry me or I will kill you."

At that instant the girl's mother, her younger sister, Delia, and her 13 year old brother, Walter, who were seated in an adjoining room, rushed to the parlor door in time to see Hattie rise from the sofa and answer defiantly:

"I will die before I would marry you."

Quick as a flash Sattler fired a shot into the girl's body. Although she must have realized what his intentions were before he fired, Miss Metecki did not turn or make an effort to escape. She fell to the floor, crying for her mother to help her. Mrs. Metecki rushed to the girl's side, hovering over her and preventing Sattler from shooting her a second time. A second shot went wild.

Attempts to Kill Himself.

Sattler ran into the kitchen crying:

"My God, I have killed her! I too, will die," and he fired a bullet into his own head.

A minute later, with terror written on his boyish face, the brother Walter ran into the South Chicago police station, which is only a block from the Metecki house.

"O, come quick, quick. A man has killed my sister and is shooting at everybody," he cried to Sergeant O'Neill.

A patrol wagon was standing ready, and Sergeant O'Neill and an ambulance surgeon, Dr. H. A. Schmershall, jumped in and were driven rapidly to the scene.

The wounded man and woman were taken to the hospital, Sattler in the patrol wagon and Miss Metecki in an ambulance wagon. After having his wound dressed at the hospital Sattler recovered his nerve and appeared calm.

Wishes He H-d Killed the Girl.

"I have no regret for my act, except that I wish I had been more successful," he said, coldly. "I loved Hattie desperately. If she did not intend to marry me she should not have received my attentions all these years only to turn me down when she became old enough to become my wife.

"I have befriended the family and herself. Five years ago, when her father, Walter Metecki, was taken ill, rather than see him lose his business as a milk dealer I took charge of it for him and ran the business six months, until he recovered his health. It was then I met Hattie It was understood we were to be married when she arrived at the proper age. I did not doubt her sincerity until of late."

Mrs. Metecki said that the youth's attentions to the girl had become offensive.

Annoyed by Persistent Wooer.

"Hattie visited relatives near Knox, Ind., for two weeks, returning home on Saturday," the mother said. "We sent her there to get rid of Sattler. He didn't know where she was, and several times came and asked me where she was. When I refused to tell him he became angry and made threats. Soon after she arrived home he came. Hattie was not cordial. He seemed disgruntled, and from his demeanor I feared he might create a scene, but I didn't suspect he would try to kill her."

Sattler is a baker and bears a good reputation. Miss Metecki's conditions is critical. Her father, mother, brother, and sister remained all night at her bedside.

It is up to the voters to decide whether Chicago shall have a new and modern system of government or continue in the same old rut. TAFT CHOKES OFF CAMPAIGN WHOOP

Secretary on Trip Shows Lack of Sympathy with "Rah Rah" Methods.

ROOSEVELT IDEAS STRONG

President's Policy Deemed Safe and Sane by Loyal Host Ready to Aid Cause.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—As the series of "keynote" speeches now being delivered in various parts of the country by Secretary Taft progress it is becoming evident that his Columbus utterance was designed for national consumption, while others touch upon minor keys, their dominating notes applying chiefly to local issues.

This is especially true of the Oklahoma talk, which was devoted carefully to a discussion, and incidentally a denunciation, of the proposed new state constitution. Now this constitution is a burning issue with the residents of the twin territories, but the remainder of the country probably will be able to sleep at night whether it is adopted or not.

Broadly, then, such national interest as is attached to Taft's little swing around the southwest rests in its present and probable effect upon the action of the next national republican convention; or, in other words, its bearing upon the rotund war secretary's chances for the presidency.

Still Hunt for Delegates?

While there is considerable effort to create an impression that Mr. Taft is not out on a preliminary still hunt for delegates, there is no reason to doubt that his trip, at least in the southwest, is regarded in this light to some extent, and that it is giving a perceptible impetus to what may soon be spoken of as the Taft boom, not that Taft is himself saying anything about running for president. On this topic he is silent. Nor do well meant intimations succeed in drawing a direct utterance from him.

Last Friday a number of prominent republicans entertained Secretary Taft at luncheon at the Noonday club in St. Louis, and Judge Franklin Ferris in a little speech spoke of him as the next president, impaling the genial Ohioan with an interrogating eye as he did so. There was a burst of applause, and Judge Ferris, having launched his bolt, sat down, expecting at least some recognition, even if deprecatory of the compliment, but Taft simply continued to wear that expansive smile he always has on tap, and not a word said he.

Here in Oklahoma it was the same. The word had been quietly passed among republican politicians in Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, and the territories that Taft's visit here would be the occasion of a sort of preliminary lineup, when applications for seats on the Taft band wagon would be taken notice of, so to speak.

Taft Chokes Off "Yawp."

This led to a notable personal gathering. Several statesmen were on hand with a well defined plan to get in a "Taft for president" yawp if half a chance offered, and were prepared to lay sundry delegations at his feet on slight encouragement, in order to provide a way and means for all this. A banquet was planned to take place after Taft had delivered his speech. When Taft heard about the banquet he at once proceeded to politely choke it off, which was accomplished; and so a few "Taft for president" boomlets had to remain on the shelf, until time provides another opportunity.

But this did not prevent a good deal of ear whispering, a favorite southwestern political pastime and the guest of the whispering was that (next, of course, to Teddy, who has a cinch on the affections of this particular locality) there is no man in public life today for whom the people of this section would rather vote than "Bill" Taft.

It should not be assumed, from this fealty to Roosevelt, that the southwest does not admire Taft on his own account. There is no doubt that Taft made a hit yesterday right off his own bat. This was shown by the enormous crowd which greeted him at the railway station, along the streets, which packed convention hall last night in the intense heat to listen to him talk, and which made frequent demonstrations of its friendly approbation.

Not a Partisan Crowd.

It was not an entirely partisan crowd. Either there were thousands of democrats in it, curious to see a man about whom they have heard so much. Then there is no doubt that Taft has a taking way with him. People seem to like him through the operation of a sort of instinct, a subconscious gravitation toward the personality of the man, but politically and personally the southwest is for Roosevelt, especially the republican segment, which must provide the delegates to the next national convention.

These people believe in what is called the "Roosevelt politics," which they understand to mean a continuation of honesty and efficiency in the administration and a vigorous effort to bring the large corporations under the regulation and control of the law. Your southwesterner is a genuine "trust buster," as the phrase goes in current political discussion, and even if he is beginning to suspect "as in Texas" that he may burn his own fingers a little in the busting, he is not yet for turning back an instant.

And the political leaders—well, everybody knows what the average politician is. He is with the voters whenever he can get a line on what they really want. Given this sentiment—one may no more doubt its existence than that of the sun—and it is a foregone conclusion that no candidate for the republican nomination who does not bear the Roosevelt indorsement need apply.

In Wake of Fairbanks' Boom.

A few months ago Fairbanks made a trip through this region on presumably much the same mission as Taft now comes. Fairbanks is also a member, and a prominent one, of the administration family at Washington, and he was given a loyal reception. His visit left a wake in the shape of a tiny but healthy Fairbanks movement.

The country was carefully sounded out as to the sentiment in favor of a "safe and sane" candidate to succeed Mr. Roosevelt. The "safe and sane" wing of the republican party has not a few influential adherents who exercise considerable influence in the southwest. These are the retainers and employés of some railroad and other large corporations, together with a considerable sprinkling of business men, who favor a return to political conservatism, an element of some strength in both parties, but too scattered in this region to successfully resist the present tendency of the party.

TAFT PLANS RESERVE ARMY?

Reported in Washington That Secretary Favors a Militia Force of 300,000 Men.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—It is reported here that Secretary of War Taft is considering the urging on congress of the passage of a bill creating a national militia reserve of 300,000 men, on half pay, to be commanded by regular army men.

FOUND SENSELESS ON STREET.

Mrs. Janette Kirkham for Fourth Time Picked Up Unconscious from the Use of Chloroform.

Found for the fourth time on the street unconscious from the use of chloroform, to the use of which she is said by the police to be addicted, Mrs. Janette Kirkham, 62 years old, 5823 Drexel avenue, was locked up yesterday at the Woodlawn police station and booked on a charge of disorderly conduct. The woman was discovered lying near the sidewalk in front of a blacksmith shop at 6550 Cottage Grove avenue. She told the police she was accustomed to the use of the drug to cure a nervous disorder from which she suffered.

Independence Day Victim is Buried.

MISS EDITH A. FREEMAN

The final episode in one of this year's fourth of July casualties occurred yesterday afternoon when funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman N. Freeman, 79 Park avenue, for their 16 year old daughter, Edith. The burial was at Forest Home cemetery.

Miss Freeman was attacked by typhoid fever several weeks before the fourth, but was believed to be on the road to recovery when Independence day, with its attendant din and danger, came round.

Efforts to keep the neighborhood of the Freeman home reasonably quiet were unsuccessful, and the racket caused a relapse from which the girl never recovered.

BUSSE SEES END OF SMOKE

Chicago Mayor Pleased with Gotham Electric Plan.

BUYS A BRAND NEW "LID."

Is of Panama Variety and Is Encircled by Band of Marked Gayety.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Fred A. Busse, mayor of Chicago, and party, who arrived in New York on Saturday to study the newly electrified lines of the New York Central railroad preliminary to their advocating similar improvements in Chicago, left for home this afternoon over the New York Central.

It is definitely announced that W. J. Wilgus, retiring vice president of the New York Central, will go to Chicago on Oct. 1 to report on the situation there.

Bion J. Arnold Picks Wilgus.

It was said today in local railroad circles that the attention of Chicago's mayor was directed to Mr. Wilgus as the man for the job of electrifying Chicago's steam railway terminals by Bion J. Arnold, formerly of the New York Central's engineering staff, and who now is consulting engineer for Chicago's transit commission.

Mr. Arnold and Mr. Wilgus have been on terms of the greatest friendship for many years. It was said also that Mr. Wilgus' resignation from the New York Central was to place him in a position to accept an offer from Chicago. While resigning from active participation in the management of the New York Central he will remain in its employ as consulting engineer, with a salary almost equal to that which he is at present drawing as vice president.

Now Up to City Council.

Before leaving New York today Mayor Busse said that the trip east was a successful one, and that much valuable information had been obtained. Asked what steps would be taken in the future toward abolishing the smoke nuisance, he said:

"It is a matter for the council of our city to decide. A report of our visit will be made to that body at the next meeting, a week from Monday."

Bringing New "Lid" Back.

The party staid at the Holland house. It was about noon when they arose today. Several friends called and the visitors were taken for a final whisk through town before luncheon. Mayor Busse was ornamented with a new Panama "lid," which was encircled by a gay band. It was the source of much amusement to his friends.

RAILROADS BALK AT BUSSE'S IDEA.

Some Say It Would Cost Too Much to Electrify Their Lines in Chicago.

OTHERS DESIRE TO WAIT.

Officials Assert There Is Doubt as to the Practicability of the Plan.

Mayor Busse's determination to put an end to the smoke nuisance by means of electrifying the steam railroads within the city limits has taken many of the railroads by surprise.

Officials of some of the roads said yesterday they were not prepared to discuss the subject, while others declared the time for considering electrification is not ripe. As an excuse for not desiring the question of a change of motive power to be raised at the present time, it was asserted that the problem of track elevation first must be solved.

This was the opinion given by Daniel Willard, second vice president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

"This is not the time to begin considering such a question," said Mr. Willard. "Of course, I am speaking only for the Burlington railroad. Our road is certainly not paying any attention to the question and I haven't heard that any other road is doing so.

"We still have the problem of elevating our Chicago terminals to solve. We are endeavoring to carry out as fast as we can our agreement with the city to elevate our tracks. They will take at least three years to complete. Other roads are in the same position.

Says Smoke Can Be Abated.

"This matter must be settled first before electrification can be considered. To attempt to electrify our locomotives while track elevation is in progress would add doubly to the confusion and make traffic almost impossible.

"Electrification would mean a tremendous expense to the railroads without any benefits to them. I think the roads are burdened enough as it is.

"What is the object of electrification? The answer is to eliminate black smoke from the atmosphere. That can be done without resorting to such drastic measures. It is only a question of intelligent firing on locomotives. I know and I speak as an expert, because I have fired an engine myself.

"We are doing all we can to reduce smoke from our locomotives to a minimum. Our instructions to our firemen, if carried out, would almost do away with smoke, but the men cannot always be watched. Smoke from factories, I am positive, can be eliminated absolutely by careful firing and by smoke consuming devices.

"I am not now in a position to say what our road would do if the question of electrification were brought officially to its notice. As matters stand now with reference to track elevation, it would not be wise to force this question upon the roads."

Illinois Central Is Interested.

Officials of the Illinois Central railroad have watched with interest the operation of the electrified suburban lines of the New York Central railroad in New York.

The Illinois Central for several years has had the matter of electrification of the suburban lines under consideration, but apparently the officials have been waiting for some other road to take the initiative. The practical working of the electrified New York Central lines in New York City is an absolute demonstration of the feasibility of the plan.

Now that the question again has been taken up in earnest by Mayor Busse, the primary object being to put an end to the smoke nuisance and make Chicago a cleaner city, the Illinois Central probably will be the first road in Chicago to electrify its suburban service.

With the Illinois Central it has been a question of whether electrification is practicable. It has more than 250 suburban trains in operation daily, and the question of whether snow would not greatly hinder traffic in winter has been a serious one. President Harahan has expressed himself as favoring immediate electrification of the Illinois suburban lines when that style of motive power has been demonstrated as practicable under all conditions.

Considered by the Northwestern.

Officials of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad also have had the subject under consideration for some time. The Northwestern road operates in the neighborhood of 220 suburban trains a day and with the officials of this railroad, as with the Illinois Central, electrification has been postponed awaiting an absolute demonstration of its practicability.

Marvin Hughitt, president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, said:

"I have noticed that Mayor Busse is studying the electrified roads in New York City. We are paying no attention to the matter. I am not prepared to discuss the subject."

To Voters: If your name was not on the polling lists at the city election last April or if you have moved out of your precinct since that election it will be necessary for you to register tomorrow in order to vote on the new Chicago charter at the special election Sept. 17.

RYAN SELLS HIS TRACTION STOCK?

Reported in New York That He Has Parted with Inter-Met. Holdings

LOST HAIR HER EXCUSE.

Woman, Disguised as Man, Tells Court She Did It to Avoid Ridicule.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE. New York, Aug. 25.

Ryan Parts with Holdings in Traction Stock?

It is understood in Wall street that Thomas F. Ryan has parted with his Interborough-Metropolitan holdings, including bonds that he was expected to keep so as to hold up the market to some extent. Bankers allied with him have been dumping the Interborough-Metropolitan securities on the market since February.

Ryan's agents have denied this when men representing August Belmont have questioned the sincerity of Ryan in the movement, but it is now regarded as established that the former boss of the Metropolitan traction company has thoroughly unloaded.

Ryan benefited greatly by the merger, which he forced upon Belmont, and for a time may have intended to hold his share of the proceeds pending the sale to the public of the watered bonds and stocks that were to be worked off. Men representing the Belmont interests intimated last night that Ryan would not be worried by a receivership and that the passing of dividends would not hurt him. These same persons said there would be interesting happenings in the Interborough-Metropolitan case on or about Wednesday of next week.

Today was one of peace, so far as the strike of meat wagon drivers was concerned. As usual on Sunday no wagons were out.

Loses Hair; Dons Man's Clothes; Is Arrested.

A woman of middle age, who said she was Natalie Pool, 1068 Fortieth street, Brooklyn, was in the night court early this morning charged with masquerading in men's clothing. She was fined $5 by Magistrate Cornell, and, not having the money, was sent to a cell. When before Magistrate Cornell she still wore striped trousers, a soft shirt, Derby hat, black coat, and eyeglasses.

Magistrate Cornell, before imposing a fine, lectured the woman for what he termed her "silly tactics."

Her reply was: "If you were in my place you would do as I am doing."

To a reporter she said that her real reason for wearing masculine clothing was that she had lost her hair as the result of illness, and that when she wore women's clothes people laughed at her. Consequently she decided to put on trousers, pose as a man, and so escape ridicule.

Will Examine Sanity of Mrs. Pepper's Husband

The commission recently appointed by Justice Maddox of the Supreme court in Brooklyn to inquire into the mental capacity of Edward Ward Vanderbilt, the rich aged lumber merchant who married Mrs. Mary Ann Scannel Pepper, better known as Mrs. Mary Pepper, the spiritualistic medium, will start the hearing tomorrow.

The marriage took place early in June last. It was quickly followed by the institution of a suit by the two daughters of the aged bridegroom to have the marriage annulled on the ground that he was an irresponsible tool in the hands of the woman.

The daughters in their complaint also declared that their father had already deeded away some of his property to his new wife and that he was in danger of parting with his entire estate in the same way.

Promises Heavy Sentence to Child Attacker.

Police Magistrate Higginbotham, in the Lee avenue court, Williamsburg, today declared that crime must be stamped out in the eastern district of Brooklyn. He spoke from the standpoint of a city official and a father, he said. Carlo Conolio, 35 years old, was accused of having tried to entice Dollie Filales, 11 years old, into a house. Magistrate Higginbotham, in holding the prisoner for sentence, said:

"It is time that severe sentences are dealt out, particularly when a man is arrested for assaulting or attempting to assault a child. It is my duty as a magistrate and a father to place you, Conolio, where you will not annoy little girls.

"Tomorrow morning I will sentence you to six months in the workhouse. Men like you are a menace to the community."

Pawnbrokers Say Month's Thefts Reach $50,000.

Pawnbrokers declare that the number of robberies in this city in the last week seems to have been larger than in any month for several years, and that many of the robberies in which the the greatest losses have occurred have not been made public by the police. They declare that, according to the inquiries made at their places, enough valuable merchandise has been stolen to stock several large general stores. The money represented by the stolen goods would reach $50,000.

One pawnbroker says that on last Thursday six lists of stolen goods were brought to his shop which would aggregate over $25,000.

Farley Lays Corner Stone of Polish School.

Archbishop Farley officiated this afternoon at the laying of the corner stone for a new parochial school in connection with the St. Stanislaus church in Seventh street. The stone was consecrated with much religious and military pomp. Twenty Polish military societies attended. St. Stanislaus' church is in that section of the east side where many Poles reside, and it is this nationality that makes up the congregation of the church. This will be the first Polish school to be established in this city.

VENEZUELA STILL STANDS PAT.

Replies to Third Note of American Minister That U. S. Claims Are Not Subject for Intervention.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug. 23 (via Willemsted, Aug. 25.)—The Venezuelan government has made answer to the third note presented to it by the American minister, W. W. Russel, regarding the five American claims against Venezuela. The answer is in the same tenor as the replies made to the two previous notes presented on the same subject, namely, that the claims were not matters for diplomatic intervention.

LOST IN ALPS; ALMOST DIES

Woman Tourist Tells of Horror and Torture of Starving.

EATS MOSS AND HER SHOES.

Peasant Passing Gorge Hears Groans and Rescues Victim.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

GENEVA, Aug. 25.—The Swiss woman who was lost in the Alps near Loeche-Les-Bain for twenty days is Mme. Schopfer. She recovered her senses today and was able to tell the doctor a story of the terrible ordeal through which she passed.

Her doctor believes that it will take a long time for her mind to recover if it ever does completely, though there is every likelihood of her physical recovery. Her survival the doctor describes as the greatest miracle he ever saw or heard of.

Loses Her Way in Gorge.

To the doctor she told how, on the morning of Aug. 1, she walked along the bank of the river Dala, intending to return to her hotel for luncheon. Fascinated by the scenery, she penetrated further up the gorge and lost her way. She added:

"While retracing my steps I fell, I don't know how many feet, into a cave. I was horrified to find that owing to the steep and slippery stone sides I was unable to climb out.

"I shouted all that day and night for help until my voice was so hoarse that I was unable to shout. I ate my last two pieces of chocolate, and continually drank water, which trickled through the rocks.

"Another day came and went, and yet another. I forgot how many because I must have become delerious. The village church, the top of the steeple of which I could see from my living tomb, seemed my only hope. I prayed daily to the steeple's cross for deliverance.

"On Sundays especially I suffered terrible mental torture, when I heard the bells pealing and the choir singing practically within a stone's throw, while I lay dying by inches.

Eats Moss and Her Shoes.

"I cannot describe my hunger. Often I dreamed of bread and biscuits, which sometimes seemed to be dancing in the air before my eyes. I ate grass, moss, and my leather shoes. Gradually I became a skeleton and my clothes fell from me.

"I had plenty of money in my purse, which I would willingly have exchanged for a piece of bread. On two nights rain soaked me, and on several days the heat was so great that I was glad to wet my head and sprinkle my clothes.

"My voice commenced to return gradually. I took good care of it, crying softly at intervals during the day when I thought people might be passing my tomb, but in vain.

"Slowly my strength failed until I was unable to stand without placing my hands on the rocks. Heavens! how I suffered from hunger. Towards the end I became desperate. I wanted to dash my head against the rocks. My mind was willing, but my flesh was too weak. Then God sent darkness and I remember no more."

In the meantime her husband's friends and guides searched in vain for her for twenty-one days. Later a peasant walking along the bank of the River Dala heard groaning and climbed down and rescued Mme. Schopfer, who was insensible. He carried her to the hospital. She recovered her senses thirty hours later.

PRAISE FOR IRISH BRAVERY.

Lord Mayor of Dublin Unveils Statue at Fontenoy, Belgium, Commemorative of Battle in 1745.

Fontenoy, Belgium, Aug. 25.—The lord mayor of Dublin today unveiled the monument erected to commemorate the bravery of the Irish brigade in the battle of Fontenoy in 1745 in the presence of 300 Irish visitors, the local authorities, and the clergy. The monument was presented to the town by various Irish societies. The unveiling speeches were made in Gaelic by Irishmen.

The lord mayor of Dublin at a banquet tonight proposed a toast to the freedom of Ireland to which David McClure of New York responded.

Frank Sullivan of San Francisco in replying to the toast, "The Sea Divided Gael," asked that Ireland be patient and await the inevitable war between America and Japan for control of the Pacific. He declared that Irishmen should not enter the British army or navy.

ARGENTINE REVOLT IS CURBED.

Insurrection in Capital of Province of San Luis Quelled and No Further Outbreak Is Expected.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, Aug. 25.—A local revolution broke out last night in the city of San Luis, capital of the province of San Luis, a town of 11,000 inhabitants, and situated about 140 miles southeast of Buenos Ayres. The chief of police was the leader of the insurrection and the governor and other provincial authorities were made prisoners. The insurrectionists immediately chose a new governor named Adaro and installed him in office. News from San Luis tonight reports that complete quiet has been restored and further disturbances are not expected.

MOORISH SULTAN TO LOSE THRONE?

Brother Forms Complete New Government, with Viziers and a Court.

LIKELY TO SEIZE RABAT.

Notables and Clans Proclaim Present Ruler Unworthy to Wear Crown.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Aug. 26, 3 a. m.—The Tangier correspondent of the Times says that official confirmation of the proclamation of Mulai Hafid as sultan at Marakesh was received on Friday and caused great stir among the native officials. It appears that none of the formalities ordained by the Mahommedan law was neglected.

A meeting of the Klema and notables was called and the sultan was adjudged guilty of maladministration. His dethronement was declared to be legally necessary, owing to the imminent danger in which he had placed the cause of Islam. The notables then declared Mulai Hafid his successor. The latter took the oath of allegiance, signing a formal document.

Proclaim New Sultan.

A large gathering of tribesmen then proclaimed the new sultan. His name was read in the prayers in the mosques in place of Mulai Abdul Aziz. Mulai Hafid nominated viziers and a court, which includes some of the most powerful men in southern Morocco.

The next few days were spent in writing letters and issuing orders to all the tribes, which were commanded to collect at Marakesh in about a fortnight's time.

Mulai Hafid is reported to have written his brother commanding him to abandon the throne, which, in the opinion of native officials here, he will probably be obliged to do. The natives, it is presumed, will assemble at Marakesh in order to inaugurate a jehad.

This, the correspondent says, seems to him to be unlikely from what is known of Mulai Hafid's character. It seems more probable that he will march north and seize Rabat, whence he can easily campaign against his brother if the latter resists.

Tranquil Regime Expected.

The correspondent is inclined to believe that the accession of Mulai Hafid will guarantee a strong Moorish government and that comparative tranquillity ultimately will ensue. It is almost certain that he will do his best to protect European interests in the coast towns and render unnecessary the further disembarkation of foreign troops and that he will attempt to quiet the existing fanatical sentiment among the tribes by proposing to negotiate with the French for the evacuation of Casablanca.

It is not believed that Mulai Hafid desires to kill or injure his brother, as he has always been fond of him, and if Abdul Aziz will resign the throne it is believed that Mulai Hafid will make him a sufficient allowance.

Clemenceau Resumes Control.

PARIS, Aug. 25.—Premier Clemenceau, who returned from Carlsbad and Munich today, has assumed active direction of the Moroccan situation, which developed during his absence. He conferred with Foreign Minister Pichon, War Minister Picquart, and Minister of Marine Thomson, who met him at the station, and tomorrow will go to Rambouillet to see President Fallieres.

The Journal Des Debats in an editorial as to the effect of M. Clemenceau's return on the Moroccan situation, says:

"He knows the sentiments of the sovereigns and the dispositions of the chancellors. He ought to know that politics today not only is most uncertain but also most costly and that calm and conservatism are essential."

Spanish Cabinet Divided.

MADRID, Aug. 25.—The newspapers are agreed that a divergence of views exist in the cabinet as to the Spanish government's attitude in Morocco. While certain of the ministers indorse the course that is being pursued, others, it is alleged, claim that the rôle created by the Algeciras conference differs from that actually being played by Spain. According to the Liberal, Premier Maura announced to the members of the cabinet that Spain would take the offensive only if her troops were directly attacked and that otherwise she would rest merely as a spectator of the internal conflicts that are rending Morocco and of what France does if the troops of that country advance into the interior.

Powerful Chiefs Join Revolt.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Aug. 26.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Tangier says that the south welcomes Mulai el Hafid, the sultan's brother, who was proclaimed sultan at Marakesh, and the coast towns are ready to receive him. They are most indifferent to the downfall of Mulai Abdul Aziz.

Three of the most powerful chiefs of the Atlas mountains have joined Mula el Hafid at Marakesh. All action at Marakesh has been suspended until he announces his intentions.

AMERICAN UNION IN COURT?

Joseph H. Choate Working on New Plan at Hague for Alliance of United States and Latin States.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 25.—Joseph H. Choate is working on a new plan for the allotment of judges for the international high court of justice, under which the representatives of the United States and those of all the Latin-American countries will form one group. This plan, it is believed, will dissipate any feeling arising from the previous proposed allotment over the lack of equality of any state in the representation of the court.

This union of the whole of the American continent, it is considered, would be of great importance not only in the establishment of the court but as a great political move, rallying around the United States, as it would, all the states of Central and South America. Such a plan would insure to the court the immediate adhesion of twenty-one countries.

Adding to these countries Germany, Austria, France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, and Russia, which are also favorable to the proposition, this would give the court the adhesion of two-thirds of the countries of the world, without taking into account other countries whose support is most likely, such as the Netherlands, Spain, Turkey, and Switzerland.

STOCK LOSSES STUPENDOUS.

British Magazine Will Print a Table Showing That Present Quotations Represent Slump of Millions.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The next issue of the Bankers' Magazine will print the table telling the tale of millions evaporated on the stock exchange by the depreciation of securities of all grades and of all varieties which the editor likens to "survey of a district afflicted by some devastating calamity."

For August the decline in 387 representative stocks reached the staggering total of $680,000,000. This makes an aggregate of $1,725,000,000 since the beginning of the year, of which $555,000,000 is in American railroad shares, $240,000,000 in British funds, and $180,000,000 in English railway and ordinary stocks. Judged purely from a percentage basis, however, the most serious losses have been in the South African market, averaging about 25 per cent.

As regards the month itself, the table indicates that American railroad securities are far in the front with a shrinkage of $260,000,000.

There are many reasons why you ask for advertised articles, but absolutely none why you should let a substituting dealer palm off something which he claims to be "just as good" or "better" or "the same thing" as the article you requested.

COUP IN CHINESE AFFAIRS

Viceroy Gives Up Office to Become Head of War Department.

ACTS ON ARMY INTRIGUES.

Dowager Empress Takes Steps to Curb Disloyalty of Military.

PEKING, Aug. 25.—It is believed tonight that Yuan Shih Kai is about to relinquish the viceroyalty of Chi Li for the purpose of becoming the head of the war department. His action is said to be due to the realization of the central government that its position is weaker than ever before and also was prompted by the reported maladministration of China's modern army by Tieh Liang, the minister of war, whose methods have resulted in the discontent of 50,000 soldiers whose pay is in arrears.

Yuan Shih Kai, when urged to assume office in the central government, before consenting to accept, named the fulfillment of certain changes relating to the affairs of the war department as a condition.

The dowager empress has summoned Chang Chih Tung and Yuan Shih Kai to consider the alarming growth of anti-Manchu sentiment. Several viceroys and governors have been memorializing the throne to explain the cause of such sentiment. The growing popular enmity is ascribed to the failure of the dowager's three edicts in the last six years removing the distinctions between Chinese and Manchus in intermarriage, abolishing the partiality shown to Manchus in law, and preventing the favoritism shown Manchus in appointments to office.

The murder of the Manchu governor, En Ming, by Chinese and Dr. Sun Yat Sen's captured correspondence have greatly excited the court. The correspondence of the reformer urged that China's undivided duty was to exterminate Manchu power. These revelations have disposed the dowager toward placing Yuan Shih Kai at the head of all defenses.

WELLMAN POLAR TRIP DELAYED

Tourists Report That Airship Did Not Sail on Aug. 23—Doubt as to Journey This Year.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Aug. 26, 3 a. m.—The Hammerfest correspondent of the Daily Mail says Walter Wellman did not start from his camp at Spitzbergen for the north pole in his airship on Aug. 23, as he hoped to do.

The last two tourist steamers of the year arrived at the camp at Virgo bay on Aug. 20. They saw the balloon high in the air, confined by anchor ropes. Mr. Wellman said he was not able to start, as the breeze was wrong. He could start in a southeast wind. The tourists banqueted Mr. Wellman and his companions. Mr. Wellman said to them:

"If I am lucky you will hear from me and the north pole in a week. If I am less lucky in a fortnight. If you do not hear from me in three weeks you will never hear from me at all."

The steamers left twenty-four hours later. It was then remarked that the balloon seemed gradually being deflated. They passed Virgo bay for the last time on Aug. 23 and no start had been made, although the weather was calm and bright. The passengers doubt if Wellman will or can start this year.

Weather Alone Delays Start.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The Matin this morning prints a telegram from Walter Wellman, head of the Wellman Chicago Record Herald arctic expedition, dated Aug. 21, saying that all the preliminary trial tests of the balloon machinery had been accomplished and that everything was ready for the start. The explorer was only awaiting better weather to enable him to regulate his compasses and make a trial ascension and hoped to start for the pole in a few days.

$200,000 THEFT IN NEW YORK BANK?

Big Defalcation in Chemical National Reported; Officers Are Silent.

ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED.

Absent Employe Is Wanted to Shed Light as to Missing Funds.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Expert accountants were busy all today and tonight in the offices of the Chemical National bank, in lower Broadway, and it was reported that a large defalcation had been discovered in the big institution, which has been known for years as Hetty Green's bank.

Detective Sergeant McCafferty, head of the bureau at headquarters, and several of his aids were out tonight searching for one of the men in the cashier's department, who is declared to have disappeared with a large amount of money.

The reports as to the extent of the embezzlement vary from $10,000 to $200,000, but no authoritative statement could be obtained upon the exact amount, because those of the officers who remained in the city absolutely refused to discuss the matter.

Officials Have Busy Day.

Vice President Joseph D. Martindale and Cashier Martin Halpin put off their usual trips to the country and were in and out of the Chemical building all during the day. President William S. Porter of the bank was in town Saturday, and after discussing the affairs of the institution with his lieutenants concluded that his presence was not necessary and went down on Long Isand.

Private detectives guarded those at work in the bank from intrusion. No inkling of what results the men who were going over the books had obtained was allowed to escape. Great secrecy also had been enjoined upon headquarters. It was admitted there that some minor official of the bank was badly wanted, but specific details of the charge against him were kept secret.

Refuses Any Light.

Vice President Martindale lives at the St. George hotel in Brooklyn. He had his dinner there tonight after a busy afternoon at the bank and then returned to the Chemical building, where he and Halpin had a consultation with the accountants. He refused, however, to be seen or to make any statement concerning the bank's alleged loss.

So involved have the books been left by the defaulter that the examination was kept up by three expert accountants tonight.

It is said that the arrest may be made tomorrow of another employé of the bank, who has been under suspicion.

TEN KILLED, 25 HURT IN WRECK.

Head-On Collision in France Between Express and Freight Trains Due to Misplaced Switch.

COUTRAS, France, Aug. 25.—Ten persons were killed and twenty-five injured in a head-on collision today between an express train bound from Bordeaux for Paris and a freight train. The accident was caused by a misplaced switch. None of those killed or wounded were Americans.

Chicago's proposed new charter will be voted on by the people Sept. 17. But the only people who can vote on it are voters whose names are properly registered by tomorrow night. Voters who are not registered or who have moved out of their voting precincts since the city election last April may put their names on the official voting lists tomorrow between 8 a. m. and 9 p. m. at the regular precinct polling places.

"Better to do a thing and rue it
Than rue the fact you did not do it."

In the business world the man who succeeds is the man who dares. Sometimes he fails, but in the long run the courage to take a chance is a paying attribute.

In the advertising field, it is the man with courage, imagination, nerve, who succeeds. A single advertising success will often more than atone for half a dozen failures.

If you have in mind an advertising possibility, it may be a profitable operation for you to "screw your courage to the sticking point."

The most powerful factor in American advertising is THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, high in esteem for quality; and for quantity, over a million copies each month.

SOFT PEDAL PUT ON WHISKY ROW.

Chief Shippy's Order to Check Revelry in the Saloons Is Enforced Rigidly.

MANAGERS IN GLOOM.

Fear Absence of Customary Nocturnal Hilarity Will Injure Their Business.

The mantle of peace and comparative quiet which had descended upon "Whisky row" was evident last night to even the casual passerby. To those who knew the "row" in its palmy days it spoke eloquently of the effectiveness of Chief Shippy's order issued several days ago declaring that music, loud talk, and laughter, and especially the patronage of unescorted women must cease.

Business was dull Saturday night along the "row"—a thing almost unprecedented in the annals of "all night" Chicago saloondom. Bartenders and waiters in the winerooms sat gloomily about waiting for customers and tips which did not appear. Managers and proprietors expressed pessimistic views as to business and predicted all sorts of calamities from a "dead" Chicago to a nine years' famine for the inhabitants of the city who are possessed of an unquenchable thirst late at night.

Even Andy Craig Succumbs.

Apparently the formerly invincible and long immune Andy Craig has succumbed to the efforts of the police, and the back wineroom, wherein the "good old times" parties of men and women met informally, exchanged confidences over steins and glasses, and held high revel, was almost deserted. Although the piano occasionally contributed its mirthless jangling in an effort to add zest to a mirthless scene, there was "nothing doing" in the place. No women and few men were there, and as the lifelessness of the place impressed itself upon incoming parties they looked about helplessly and drifted away.

"Business is rotten and there is nothing doing," vouchsafed Andy's manager and general factotum. "We're up against it this time, all right. There are policemen and plain clothes men hanging around all the time and there isn't a possible show of a woman coming in for a bracer or a nightcap, unless she has got a man along with her.

"Up Against It Good and Hard."

"The police have got their orders straight from the top and there seems no show of their letting up. If this thing keeps up the business will be shot to pieces and we might as well close up. We're up against it good and hard, that's all there is to it."

Although the machine piano occasionally burst forth, its music was shortlived and spasmodic. A lookout was posted at the door of the Tivoli and upon the appearance of a policeman the watchman dodged inside and the music ended abruptly.

One place, the Boston, at 394 State street, offered defiance to the commands of Chief Shippy. Within the rear room were several parties of men and women drinking. Although no unaccompanied women were in the room, a number were seated upon the porch just beyond the rear door, and upon the appearance of a party of men they walked forth, took their places at the same table, and made known the fact that they were possessed of thirsts.

Women Forbidden to Smoke.

Two women who essayed to smoke cigarets were promptly "called down" by a waiter, much to their astonishment.

"Here, you can't smoke in here. It's the orders of the police, and its got to stick this time. And we can't give you any more checks for drinks," explained the bartender, when summoned to shed light upon the phenomenon.

There was no music at the Boston, and the parties who entered the rear room were subjected to close scrutiny by the lookout and the manager. Women who have made the places along the row their headquarters for years declared that the district was more quiet than ever they had seen it before.

No Music Sunday Night.

The dullness and silence of Saturday night and Sunday morning was followed by silence Sunday night. Music was not heard along the row or anywhere else in saloons. Among the places where the stillness last night was oppressive was the Olympia in Wabash avenue. The usually noisy saloons along Thirty-first street were still.

Salvation Army Outing.

The eleventh annual excursion of the Chicago Salvation army is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 29, via steamer Theodore Roosevelt to Michigan City. Music will be provided by the Territorial Staff Band, augmented by the Salvation Army Scandinavian orchestra. The boat will leave the foot of Clark street at 10 a. m., and the Soo City, sister ship, will leave from the same place at 1 o'clock, so that those who are unable to go in the morning will be enabled to spend the afternoon with the party at Michigan City, returning from the latter place at 4:20 and 6:20 p. m.

Awakening Slowly from Long Sleep.

FLOSSIE BENNETT

Flossie Bennett of Kankakee, 16 years old, who fell asleep a week ago, and has had only one brief moment of consciousness since, is reported to be awakening slowly under the influence of gentle nerve stimulation.

The girl, who is the daughter of an attaché of the Kankakee hospital for the insane, became uncontrollably drowsy last Monday afternoon, and early in the evening fell asleep. A day or two later she awoke for a moment and begged her mother frantically not to let them put her in a coffin. Then, in spite of all efforts to arouse her, she went to sleep again.

Physicians believe she will be brought safely out of the strange stupor. Miss Bennett was employed as a clerk in a bakery.

GIRL LOST IN GALE; MYSTERY

Brooklyn, N. Y., Teacher in a Strange Disappearance.

SOUGHT FOR THIRTY HOURS.

Hundreds of Campers at Lake Hopatcong Join Search.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Miss Agnes Maguire, a teacher in a public school of Brooklyn, and her cousin, Charles Maguire of Dover, N. J., were riding in a buggy along the shore of Lake Hopatcong Saturday evening, when they were overtaken by a violent thunder storm.

They hurried to a cottage known as Camp Look Who's Here and the young man left his cousin alone behind the storm flaps of the buggy while he hastened into the cottage to get a suitcase. When he returned, within five minutes, Miss Maguire was not in the buggy.

Thirty Hours' Search Vain.

For thirty hours a hundred campers along the shores of the lake have searched for her and not a trace of the missing woman have they found.

The woman gave up her school in Brooklyn last February because she was near a breakdown. Her nerves were still weak when she went down to visit her uncle, Bernard Maguire, in Dover on Thursday last. Charles Maguire had left a suit case at a cottage at the camp, where he has staid recently, and asked his cousin to drive with him to get it. They were well on their way when the storm came upon them suddenly.

Terrified by Lightning.

Miss Maguire was terrified by the flashes of lightning. Charles left his cousin temporarily and when he returned she was gone.

The young man, thoroughly terrified, roused the whole camp and men in raincoats began beating through the trees about the spot where the buggy had been hitched. They called again and again above the noise of the storm and explored all the hillside leading from the road down to the camp, without success. Miss Maguire had disappeared as completely as though caught up in the lap of the storm.

AUTO TURNS OVER; TWO DEAD; 4 HURT

Boston Banker and Chauffeur Meet Death on Way to Narragansett Pier.

WOMEN IN PARTY INJURED

Wife and Daughter of Owner of Car and Widow of One of Victims in the Crash.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—While speeding at a rate of forty miles an hour this afternoon, en route from Newport to Narragansett Pier, W. Waldo Merrill, a prominent banker of Boston, and a member of Boston's stock exchange, 53 State street, was instantly killed when the motor car turned turtle at a sharp angle where the road turns near South Ferry.

Eric Sandstrom of Nattapan, Mass., the chauffeur, was also instantly killed by the accident.

The car was owned by Frank Milliken of the brokerage house of Cory & Milliken, 15 State street, Boston. He, his wife, and daughter, and Mrs. Merrill were badly bruised in the crash.

When Sandstrom attempted to make the turn, eyewitness say, the car reared forward and turned over on end. Mr. Merrill and the chauffeur were crushed beneath the heavy machine.

Mr. Merrill was seated on the front seat of the car beside Sandstrom, the chauffeur. Mr. and Mrs. Milliken were seated in the tonneau. Mrs. Merrill sustained internal injuries. Miss Reta Milliken suffered a broken wrist.

The injured people were taken to a hospital at Newport and the bodies of Merrill and Sandstrom were removed to Wakefield, R. I.

AUTOMOBILE TAKES A DIVE FROM DECK OF LAKE STEAMER

Chicago Pleasure Trip of Milwaukee Tourist Ended by Plunge of His 5,000 Pound Motor Car Into the River.

A prospective day of sightseeing in Chicago was spoiled for J. S. Fields of Milwaukee when his 5,000 pound touring car skidded from the deck of the City of Racine into the river as the boat was drawing up to the Goodrich wharf yesterday morning.

The automobile is declared by the ship's crew to have been well blocked and with all brakes on, but its weight proved too much for all these preventives when the boat listed to port. The passengers had crowded to that side of the vessel and the gangways were ready to be thrown out when the big car slid out of the open gangway and sank beneath the water.

The accident happened shortly after 6 o'clock, but it was not until noon that efforts to recover the heavy machine were successful. It was found that beyond the bending of a few rods and the breaking of a lamp no damage had been done to the car and it was run up into the warehouse to dry.

ROLLED ON PAVEMENT BY AUTO.

George Sads, 36 years old, 640 West Twenty-first street, was struck by an automobile when crossing Jackson boulevard at Clark street last evening and rolled several feet along the pavement under the machine. He suffered internal injuries that the physicians at the Chicago Emergency hospital consider serious. R. C. Butler, the chauffeur, was locked up at the Harrison street station.

Leo Guerin, 13 years old, 8436 Union avenue, was severely injured in the afternoon when a bicycle he was riding was struck by an automobile at West Eighty-seventh street and Vincennes road. His right leg was broken and he suffered internal injuries.

The occupants of the automobile, which was owned and operated by A. H. Teltgen, 13626 Indiana avenue, were not arrested.

FOUR DEAD IN DAY BY CAR ACCIDENTS

Woman's Skull Is Fractured When She Alights Before Stop Is Made.

SCORCHING BY MOTORMAN

Recklessness Blamed for Buggy Wreck; Joseph Hunt Dead, Companion Hurt.

The killing of Joseph Hunt by a speeding street car early yesterday morning was followed during the day by the death of two persons who had been injured in car accidents on Saturday and in the evening by the killing of a woman who was thrown to the pavement while alighting.

The Dead.

HUNT, JOSEPH, 25 years old, 5464 Kimbark avenue, thrown from buggy by speeding car at State and Congress streets.

MAIER, WILLIAM, 32 years old, 230 West Forty-sixth place, died at the People's hospital of injuries suffered Saturday on a Wentworth avenue car; he leaned out from the back platform and his head struck a trolley pole.

SALVO, ROSE, 7 years old, 145 West Fourteenth street, struck by a car in front of her home Saturday evening; died at the Presbyterian hospital.

ANDRE, MISS MARY, 58 years old, Washington, Ia., fell while alighting from an Indiana avenue car at Michigan avenue and suffered injuries which resulted in her death a short time later.

Alights Before Car Stops.

Miss Tendre was leaving the car in company with Miss May Wolf to go to the latter's room at 1814 Michigan avenue, when she fell. The car had not come to a full stop when she placed one foot on the street. She was thrown to the ground and her head struck the pavement. Her skull was fractured and she became unconscious. She was taken to the office of Dr. John Weinlander, 1805 Wabash avenue, where she received medical attention, but she died in the physician's office.

The police of the Twenty-second street station were notified, but made no arrests.

Death from Car's Speeding.

Reckless speeding by motormen after midnight hours is said to be responsible for the accident that resulted in the death of Hunt and the serious injury of Frank Chambers, 22 years old, 5449 Woodlawn avenue, who were thrown from a buggy.

Members of the Chambers and Hunt households, both well known in Hyde Park, announced, after investigation, that the witnesses interviewed by them were unanimous in the statement that the street car was "scorching as fast as the speediest automobile." Postponement of the inquest on the body of young Hunt, who is a first cousin of Inspector Nicholas Hunt, will be asked, to afford time for the gathering of evidence.

At Work, Not on Carousal.

"I am satisfied the boys were blameless and the motorman was allowing his car to run at a wild speed," said Patrick Chambers, father of Frank Chambers. "Nobody ever knew either of the boys to indulge in liquor or carousing.

"They had been out on business connected with the Illinois Tunnel company, for which both worked, my son as an electric engineer and Joe Hunt as a timekeeper. They had been at shaft 9, near the Northwestern depot, until after midnight watching a new motor that my son had just installed.

"They were driving south in State street and had turned into Congress street to come home by way of Michigan avenue, when a north bound street car ran into the buggy. The terrific speed at which the motorman was going made a stop impossible."

Fractures of the skull and severe contusions were sustained by both. Hunt died twenty minutes after the accident. Four square inches of broken bone were removed from the skull of Chambers, and it was announced last night he has a chance to recover.

Motorman George Chisman said that the accident was due to the young men's carelessness and that he shut off the current when he saw they did not heed the gong.

Search for Car Crew.

Detectives are searching for the crew of the car which killed Thomas O'Neill at Polk street and Wabash avenue Saturday night. The carmen did not stop, and officials of the Chicago City railway said no report had been made.

Mrs. Julia M. Adams, 68 years old, 6818 Green street, suffered severe injuries when she fell from a Halsted street car at West Sixty-fifth street. Mrs. Adams was stepping from the car when, it is said, it started forward, throwing the woman to the street. Her head struck the pavement and she suffered severe injuries. She was taken to St. Bernard's hospital.

DEMENTED MAN VAINLY SOUGHT

Relatives Find No Trace of Samuel R. Handy, Who Wandered from Son's Residence Last Week.

Vain efforts have been made to find Samuel R. Handy, 75 years old, who wandered away from the residence of his son, Richard Fleming Handy, 5487 Monroe avenue, last Wednesday. Mr. Handy returned to Chicago from New York recently, after a two years' absence, in company with his daughter, Mrs. M. C. Jellison. He had been out of his mind for some time, and temporarily, before being placed in a sanitarium, he was at his son's residence.

Mr. Handy for some time suffered from the illusion that enemies were after his money. He came to Chicago forty years ago, and for a long time was an official in the land department of the Illinois Central railroad.

The Stanton avenue police have been asked to look for Mrs. Pearl Lamb, 26 years old, 2842 Elmwood place, who disappeared Friday morning. Her husband fears she has committed suicide. She was despondent because of ill health.

COMING FROM WHOLE WORLD.

One hundred delegates will represent the fifty chapters of the organization, which is one of the oldest "frats" in the world. This morning the governing body will hold a conference and tonight a smoker in the Auditorium hotel.

Among the speakers at the banquet Wednesday night will be Charles O. Maas of New York City and Col. J. B. Curtis of New York, who is the favored candidate of the eastern contingent for the presidency this year.

The monument is presented to the lodge by Mrs. Sarah A. Eddy, 1159 Washington boulevard, widow of the former officer. The monument will be formally presented to the lodge by George M. Moulton, past grand master of masons in Illinois, and will be accepted by Elmer E. Beach, grand master for the Third district of Illinois.

The unveiling will be done by little Jeannette May Eddy.

SUFFER A DAY OF THIRST

"Awful Experience" of Excursionists to South Haven.

CLUB SCHEME BROKEN UP.

Crowds Go to Resort to Find Law Reaches "Chamber of Horrors."

Summer excursionists at South Haven yesterday were unable to find "blind pigs" in any of the haunts so well known to the Sunday crowds from the lake boats. It was the first "real dry" Sunday of the 1907 season, and there were thousands of the visitors who, coming unarmed with "pocket pistols," suffered the pangs of a thirst all day in the streets of the sun blistered little town.

For several seasons South Haven has been "dry" theoretically, but the blind pigs squealed with more or less regularity. There was one haunt especially that had more than a local fame. To this the title of "the chamber of horrors" had been given by the preachers and reformers of the town.

In Grip of the Law.

It was because the grip of the law took hold of Edward Wason, the alleged proprietor of "the chamber," that everything became suddenly dried up. To Wason was attributed the distinction of discovering that if blind pigs—or "chambers of horrors"—were called "clubs," and admission denied to all except the holders of "membership" cards, the strong drinks forbidden by the local option laws might be sold ad libitum.

For his temerity in making this discovery Wason was arrested Saturday night in the resort he is said to have conducted in the basement of the Avery Beach hotel. The leader of the "wets" having been spirited away to the county seat by deputy sheriffs, the spigot industry was halted completely.

Boldness Cause of Disaster.

It was the boldness of Wason's agents in distributing "club cards" aboard all the boats from Chicago and other ports that led to his undoing. Encouraged by Wason's success and his apparent immunity from prosecution several of the summer hotels are said to have started "clubs" and distributed "membership cards" as an inducement to prospective patrons. The proprietors of the Avery Beach hotel were arrested once and paid a fine, but of late the "club" was said to have been run as a separate enterprise, though still in the hotel basement.

Passengers returning on the City of South Haven last night from South Haven acknowledge with disgust that the drought over there yesterday was "just awful."

MARKET-FAIR AT COLISEUM FOR LEATHER AND SHOE MEN.

Second Annual Event Will Gather Big Leaders of Industry and Offer Striking Exposition of Progress.

The largest group of shoe and leather industry exhibits ever gathered under one roof in the world is promised for the second annual shoe and leather market fair, which will open at the Coliseum next Thursday and continue one week.

The annex to the Coliseum will be known as "Machinery hall," and machinery in operation, showing how lasts are made, how the crude product of the tanneries is transformed into a myriad of forms for the scientific manufacture of footgear, will make this one of the most popular features of the market fair.

More than 50,000 square feet of exhibit space has been provided by Supt. Fest's plans and all of this has been taken, the total number of exhibiters from the United States being 255. Several foreign agents of leather industries have applied for space and their material is said to be on its way to Chicago by fast freight.

ELGIN MAYOR PASTOR'S TEXT

Minister Holds Up Price as a "Terrible Example."

BRAINY, BUT RUINED BY RUM

Front Pew Reserved for the Official, but He Doesn't Occupy It.

Mayor Arwin E. Price was held up as a "terrible example" to the youth of the community by the Rev. J. M. Schneider of the Epworth M. E. church of that city in his sermon last evening on "What Shall We Do With the Saloon?"

Mayor Price was invited to occupy a front pew, but did not accept the invitation. The church was crowded.

"The saloon," said the young minister, "has done more to bring about rotten politics in Elgin's municipal affairs than any other force. Nothing proves this better than the present mayor, who is a living example of the evil effects of the saloon.

Whole City Feels Mortified.

"The whole city feels mortified by the mayor's recent conduct. All good citizens that I have heard express themselves have declared they felt a sense of personal disgrace in the repute that his attached to Elgin's name throughout the country because of the mayor's behavior.

"As chief executive of the city the mayor has set an awful example to the young men of the community. The conduct of such a high official undoubtedly will have a bad influence upon the city's youth."

Mr. Schneider made a plea for the total abstinence of every individual, including the mayor.

The minister who attacked Mayor Price from the pulpit fought hard to bring about his defeat at the spring election.

"Elgin knew all about Mayor Price's habits before it chose him as its chief executive," said Mr. Schneider after his sermon. "While citizens are deploring his recent conduct, which has been outrageous, the city really is entitled to no sympathy. It is getting what it deserves for electing such a man."

Mr. Schneider prefaced his disparaging remarks about the mayor by saying he was a man of brilliant parts, recognized by Elgin as an able chief executive. He said the mayor was one of many brilliant men the saloon had dragged down.

Mayor Subpœnaed by Saloonist.

Today Mayor Price will appear in Justice J. H. Becker's court as a witness at the hearing of a case against Saloonkeeper Henry A. Siems, charged with keeping open his bar after closing hours. The mayor has been subpœnaed by Attorney James Flynn, representing Siems. Exactly what the mayor is expected to testify to has not been divulged.

STUDYING AMERICAN METHODS.

Member of London Common Council Is Favorably Impressed by Energy of Chicago.

George Briggs, who has been a member of the common council of London for fourteen years, is at the Auditorium hotel with Mrs. Briggs. He is visiting the United States for the purpose of studying the work of the various municipalities with a view of adopting some of the best features that he may find in our city work. "This is a wonderful city," said Mr. Briggs, "a town of great energy and confidence. I find a Chicago man is confident of himself and of almost everything he undertakes. The work of the city council here I have not yet been able to study, as the summer vacation is on, I am told. However, I shall visit every point of interest before leaving here next week for the Pacific coast."

SAVINGS DEPOSITS.

From every side testimony comes that the people of the United States are prosperous. Now and then a pessimist posing as a statistician says that this prosperity is purely fictitious. He takes delight in showing the percentage of increase in the various items which make up the actual cost of living. He asserts that if this feature of present day life is taken into account the people are worse off than ever.

Such a man finds little comfort in a report like that of the Illinois auditor of public accounts on the subject of savings deposits. There it is asserted that one person in every eight in the state has a savings account in a state bank. To find $12,000,000 in savings banks in Chicago in 1890, $55,000,000 in 1900, and more than $160,000,000 in 1907 certainly has something of significance in the direction of proving the prosperity of the people of this city.

The rise in prices has not interfered with the weekly visits of the wage earner to his savings bank. There has remained a sufficient margin between his wages and the cost of living to enable him to keep on adding in larger measure than in the days of lower prices to the store he is laying up for a rainy day.

An advance in stock quotations may mean prosperity for a few. The steady increase in savings bank deposits is unerring evidence of the prosperity of the many. There may be a lack of prosperity in Wall street, but not in Illinois.

THE WHIPPING POST.

Now and then when there is a particularly flagrant case of wickedness called to public attention advocates of the whipping post come forward and urge a return to this oldtime form of punishment. The growth of the humanitarian spirit in connection with criminology has been marked by the abolition of methods which once found favor, and the whipping post long since disappeared, except from a few places. Delaware has been the conspicuous instance of a state which has retained it.

The experience of one of the officers of a state institution who has just given up his place is not favorable to the effectiveness of the whipping post. He reports that since November, 1901, he has whipped 235 men, giving them from five to sixty lashes each, according to the nature of the offense. Of this number sixty had been whipped before, some of them as many as six times. His judgment is that this record does not sustain the contentions of the advocates of the whipping post as to its certain effectiveness in lessening crime. He himself has become tired of his job, which one can easily imagine to be anything but a pleasant one.

The tendency among those who are studying criminals is strong to do away with harsh and cruel methods and to appeal to the better instincts of humanity in every way possible. They have their faith sorely tried on many occasions. Their efforts often appear to be futile. Those whom they would help abuse the kindness of their friends. Nevertheless there is a steady persistence in the belief in the superiority of kindness to brutality.

The testimony of the Delaware whip wielder goes to show that Delaware ought to give up the whipping post. It is strange that the state should take pride in clinging to a brutal anachronism.

AN AUTOMOBILE RECORD.

A twenty-eight horse power automobile has covered the 1,050 miles between Chicago and New York in thirty-nine hours and fifty-three minutes. There was a preventable delay of sixty-one minutes at one of the relay stations. The running time averaged thirty miles an hour, and in some stretches where the roads were good there was a speed of sixty miles. Even over the hilly parts fast time was made. In the whole trip there was but once when a stop had to be made because of a tire puncture. The record was hardly made before another machine was started from Chicago with a hope of lowering it still further.

It is evident that the machinery of automobiles is approaching perfection when a journey of such character can be made with so little difficulty. There is not much likelihood that motoring to New York will become a common thing, for few who can afford it will care to take a dusty ride of forty hours when every comfort can be enjoyed on an eighteen hour train running at a convenient time. At the same time the skill of workmanship which makes the automobile trip possible deserves more than passing notice.

It is to be remembered, too, that this trip was made over all sorts of roads, some of them good, some of them wretched, and few of them coming anywhere near the ideal for fast driving. The relays were so arranged that persons who were familiar with the topography of a particular region took the machine through, this precaution, no doubt, having considerable bearing upon the record. Allowing for that, the time made over the 1,000 miles is highly suggestive of still more remarkable results when there is a good roadway between Chicago and the sea.

THE NEW CHARTER.
NO. I.

The people of Illinois amended their constitution three years ago that Chicago might have a new charter and a Municipal court to replace the justice shops. It has enjoyed the benefits of that court for a year. The adoption of the new charter next month will complete the work of the men who drafted the constitutional amendment.

The preëminent gift of the charter is consolidation. If that were all it gave it would be cause for rejoicing. The territory embraced within the corporate limits of Chicago contains more separate independent governing bodies than any other territory of equal area on the face of the earth. There is the municipal government proper. There are five park boards, three important and two unimportant. There are the board of education and the public library board.

These minor municipalities are inside the city but are beyond its control. Each of them has the taxing power, and when it wishes to levy higher taxes it does not stop to consider what the effect will be on the finances of the city government, but goes to the legislature for an extension of its taxing power, and usually gets it. For some of them it has been almost doubled.

No other city is governed in such an aimless and costly way. The remedy for it is centralization, the substitution of one governing body for eight. The representatives of the people of the entire city ought to have the exclusive power to tax and distribute the proceeds of taxation. Otherwise there can be neither economy nor efficiency.

The new charter makes the city government supreme. It deprives these petty independent boards of their taxing power. The centralization of authority will bring with it a more equitable distribution of the contributions of the taxpayers among the different objects of municipal care. No one will hereafter be pinched while another is getting much more than its share.

The inequalities in taxation which exist now will disappear. Property in one division will no longer have to contribute more than that in another. A number of useless officials will be put out of existence. There will be a unity and simplicity of administration hitherto unknown.

A few years ago, after a long struggle, Chicago managed to get rid of the town governments, the useless and expensive relics of an outworn system. Now is the time to resume the work of consolidation and give the city one government in the place of eight.

BRAZIL AS A FIRST CLASS POWER.

The press of Brazil is trying to excite the people of South America to resent what the Brazilian papers consider an insult to Brazil offered by the Hague conference. A grouping of the powers represented at the conference has been proposed, the powers of different groups paying a larger or smaller portion of the expenses of the peace tribunal. In this grouping Brazil is not rated among the first class powers, hence all the indignation.

Except in area and in the exportation of coffee and rubber, Brazil is not to be ranked with the powers which are commonly considered to be first class. It has 260 times the area of Belgium, with two and one-half times the population, but less than one-third the commerce. From its situation and its relations with the rest of the world it is at present much less important as a power than Belgium, which is an independent kingdom only by grace of the greater powers. Belgium ranks low among European powers in the matter of illiteracy, but nearly twice as many people can read and write among the Belgians as among the Brazilians, of whom 84 per cent are illiterate.

National pride may be pricked by the assignment of the second rank to a nation, but no amount of bluster or brag will make up for the lack of the qualities which make a nation great. The nations of Europe which have contentedly accepted the second rank assigned them are just as happy as if they had been put in the first rank, where they do not belong. Brazil covers fifteen times the ground which the German empire covers. It would be insanity to consider the two nations as of equal importance in the making of history. The Brazilians should be philosophical enough to recognize this fact and the additional fact that their individual happiness is in no way disturbed by their lack of rank.

It is with nations as it is with individuals; added power brings added responsibility, not always greater tranquillity. Germany has to keep under arms six hundred times as many soldiers per square mile of territory as Brazil keeps. The time may come when the population of Brazil will exceed that of any European country, when its commerce may be of more importance than that of the great powers of today. When that time comes, if it ever does, it will not be necessary for the Brazilian press to call attention to the claims of their country to the first rank. In the meantime it is not worth while for any of the South American countries to get excited over a matter of classification.

THAT CUBAN BILL.

The soldiers sent to Cuba to keep the peace have cost the United States $2,554,970 more than if they had remained in this country. This is a large sum, but it amounts to only 3 cents apiece for the citizens of the United States. This government has a legal and moral responsibility for the preservation of order in Cuba, and is fortunate in finding that it costs no more, for whatever the cost we will have to pay it.

Some day there will be another attempt at the establishment of a permanent native government, and then a little later another bill for the cost of intervention. Events will proceed around this circular path until what has been called "manifest destiny," which seems more plainly than ever to deserve that name, joins the two countries more intimately in an indissoluble union.

The breaking out of yellow fever in the island, after several years of immunity, shows how necessary it is to have the American authorities get a tighter grip on the island than they have now. The United States must prevent not merely the damage to commerce and the destruction of property which would accompany civil war on the island but the deterioration of public works and the risk to the public health growing out of native indifference to sanitation in a period of peace. American lives and American capital must be protected from the effects of both malice and laziness. No American soldiers would have died of yellow fever at Cienfuegos if it had not been for the utter neglect of the local Cuban authorities. Except in Havana they pay no attention to sanitation. All the Americans taught them about the prevention of yellow fever has been forgotten.

The people of the United States are not so altruistic that they would acquiesce heartily in the payment of millions of dollars to keep peace in Cuba among Cubans purely out of love for their neighbors. They spent money and sacrificed lives for Cuba when they were led to believe that Cuba was helpless under a foreign yoke. But when it comes to keeping Cubans from hurting each other, that is another matter. It must be done, but Americans would pay these bills ruefully and solely from a strong sense of duty if it were not the belief of most Americans that this is only a temporary stage of the relations between these countries, and that the land for which we are paying money will some day be a part of the United States. It is this same feeling as to the future which robs the Isle of Pines question of all seriousness. What difference does it make whether this island is Cuban or American if the two countries are to be one?

EDUCATIVE FARM SHOWS.

A promise of genuine entertainment and instruction for urban minds is to be found in the announcement of both a corn show and a dairy show to be held in October. The farm show of the past was often a thing to excite the humor and ridicule of the city spectator, who liked to find in it a proof of his own sophisticated superiority. But this same spectator is now reduced to a state of awe and humility by the evidence that farm shows afford that it is in the country that science and higher education are doing most practical work.

The list of prizes to be offered at these shows affords proof of the diversity of interest and versatility of mind of the modern farmer. Wire fencing and talking machines, cream separators and mandolins, feed mills and dinner sets, are among these rewards, and offer piquant suggestion of a variety of pursuits unknown to the sadly satiated city soul. Is it not possible that the symbolic hayseed of the future must be looked for in the hair of the city youth rather than in that of his highly evolved country brother?

THE WORLD'S MESSAGES.

[From the National Magazine.]

That we may communicate at will with the remotest corners of the earth is so familiar a fact that we never stay to ponder the more curious details. The land lines crisscross the sky in our great cities, follow the railroads, climb the mountains, and shoot over prairie and through forest to the ocean. You can hardly escape them wherever you go. Their red gold glint allures the Mobanji cannibals of the Haute Congo, or climb 12,345 feet above sea level, to weird Titicaca in Peru, the loftiest of the world's lakes, and you may flash a message thence to New York or Chicago.

The camel caravans of the Sahara; the kangaroos and "black fellows" of Australia's Dead Heart; the elephants of Malayan jungles, and the nomad Mongols of the great Gobi desert of Central Asia—all are familiar with these nerves of the world's trade.

Less familiar, perhaps, are the deep sea cables, yet their circuit is no less daring. The coasts of the continents are fairly festooned with them. At least twelve swing over ocean abysses between the old world and the new. There are three from Land's End, in England, to Lisbon; three from Spain to Brazil; two from Gibraltar to Alexandria, in Egypt; four down the Red sea, from Suez to Aden; three across the Indian ocean from Aden to Bombay; two from Madras across the bay of Bengal to Penang, and thence on by the straits of Malacca to Sumatra, Java, Australia, and New Zealand.

Even the cable map of the China sea, Formosa strait, and the Yellow sea now compares favorably with that of the gulf of Mexico. In short, these carriers of hundreds of millions of the world's messages, trade and personal, total 740,000 miles of land wires and 173,000 nautical miles of cable.

MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

Copyright: 1907: By the Marquise de Fontenoy.

ONE of England's most famous wits, on a memorable occasion, divided mankind into "men, women, and Herveys." The death of the chief of the great and influential house of Hervey—namely: the marquis of Bristol, and the accession to the family honors and vast estates by his nephew, Capt. Frederick William Hervey of the royal navy, until now member of parliament for Bury St. Edmunds, deserves more than the three line cable dispatch which is all the news so far received in this country.

The late marquis was one of the most powerful champions in England of the cause of international arbitration, and not only supported by his great political and social influence, and by his generous contributions, every practical movement for the settlement of international disputes without recourse to war but likewise was the first member of the house of lords to raise his voice in that assembly in favor of the cause when he submitted in July, just twenty years ago, the following resolution:

"That this house, in view of the increasing armaments of European nations, is of the opinion that the formation of a permanent international tribunal for the reference of national disputes in the first instance is highly desired."

It is of interest to recall just at this moment, when so vigorous an effort is being made by the American plenipotentiaries at The Hague peace congress to establish a permanent tribunal of this kind, that the late Lord Salisbury, then prime minister, opposed and defeated Lord Bristol's motion, on the ground "that at present he could see no prospect of the establishment of such an international tribunal."

◆

The new marquis was a classmate of the present prince of Wales, and of the latter's elder brother, the late duke of Clarence, on board the Britannia, spent four years as midshipman attached to the North American squadron on board the Bellerophon, flagship of Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield, and saw active service in the Egyptian war, especially at Suakim, where he also formed part of the naval brigade employed in the military operations on shore.

He had reached the command of a battleship by the time that he was persuaded to stand for parliament as representative of Bury St. Edmunds, a town with which the Herveys have been identified for so long; and now that he has succeeded to the marquisate it is practically certain that he will never go to sea again, which is all the more to be regretted as he has the reputation of being the finest gunnery officer in the service.

In the house of commons he achieved note mainly by his championing the retention in the navy of the birch as an instrument of discipline among the young boys. In speaking in behalf of the birch, the captain treated the house to some interesting details concerning the birchings which he received when at school, and to which he attributed his subsequent success in life, priding himself, indeed, on the scars left by the instrument of torture.

The late marquis was not rich, in spite of his extensive estates, owing to the tremendous depreciation of agricultural property in England; but the new peer is wealthy, being married to a wife who is not only a charming and good looking woman but, moreover, the daughter and heiress of the late G. E. Wythes, the multi-millionaire railroad contractor and partner of the father of Lord Brassey.

It is needless to state that the Herveys, of whose house the new Lord Bristol now becomes chief, were at the battle of Hastings, and that they filled high offices in the reigns of Henry II., Richard Cœur de Lion, and King John. But what is perhaps of more interest to state is the fact that they have been in the possession of Ickworth park, their ancestral home near Bury St. Edmunds, ever since the war of the roses, the property having been brought into the family through the marriage of Thomas Hervey to the sole child and heiress of Henry Drury of Ickworth, in the reign of King Henry VI.

Ickworth house is an immense but hideous place. In fact the eccentricity of its design bears eloquent evidence of the fact that it was planned by an amateur architect—namely: the fourth earl of Bristol, bishop of Derry, and leader of the Irish volunteer movement there, 1779 to 1783. The principal feature is a huge rotunda, in which are situated the principal rooms, each of course shaped in the segment of a circle. The top of the central dome is 150 feet from the ground, and the lofty cupola renders the place a landmark from many a mile around. The mansion stands in a grand old park of about 2,000 acres, heavily wooded with trees many hundreds of years old, and among the art treasures that adorn the walls of the dining room are two of the most famous masterpieces of Velasquez.

One of the best known members of the Hervey family was the one who was the favorite of Queen Caroline, consort of George II., and the bête noir of Pope, who was wont to denounce him in verse as "Lord Fanny." He was a clever writer, however, and it is to him that we are indebted for some of the most interesting memoirs of the reign of George II.

The plebeian wife of the third Lord Bristol was tried by the house of lords and convicted of bigamy by that tribunal for marrying Evelyn Pierrepont, duke of Kingston, concealing from him the fact that she had wedded Lord Bristol secretly prior to his accession to the family honors and while he was a mere officer in the navy, soon abandoning him. Of course, after this trial and conviction (she was let off with the mere payment of the fees in the case), she ceased to be duchess of Kingston. But as Lord Bristol considerately forbore from divorcing her she remained to the end of her life a peeress of the British realm.

Lord Stradbroke, who is now in Canada superintending the work of the British artillery team there, and who proposes to spend some time in the United States before returning home, is the chief of the old Suffolk family of Rous, one of the best known members of which in modern time was the famous Admiral Rous of jockey club and racing celebrity. Lady Stradbroke was, prior to her marriage, one of the most admired beauties in London society, where she was known as "Baby" Fraser, daughter of the universally popular Gen. Keith Fraser, inspector general of cavalry, and granddaughter of that wonderful old woman Mme. de Falbe.

It is owing to the intimate friendship which existed between Mme. de Falbe and Queen Alexandra that the latter makes so much of a favorite of Lady Stradbroke and is the godmother of her little boy, Viscount Dunwich.

Lord Stradbroke, though he is a soldier and an A. D. C. to the king, is vice admiral of Suffolk and as such exercises the prerogatives of lord lieutenant of the county, besides enjoying all sorts of old prerogatives with regard to the coast and the flotsam and jetsam. He makes his home at Henham hall, a beautiful place of some 12,000 acres, a feature of the park being an old tree in which Sir John Rous, the first baronet, was hidden and fed by his wife, the lovely Elizabeth Knevitt, as long as the Roundheads of Cromwell were searching for him throughout the district.

Later on Sir Robert Rous and other kindred Jacobite spirits used to meet around this tree to drink to "the king over the water." The mansion dates from the eighteenth century, when it was built on the site of a much older house destroyed by fire. Lord Stradbroke has a number of sisters, one of whom, Lady Augusta Fane, is a frequent visitor to the United States, and a familiar figure in New York society and in the Berkshires. Another sister, Lady Hilda McNeill, lost her life while endeavoring to rescue a little boy from drowning.

The late Lady Stradbroke was a frequent contributor to the London World, and it was one of her unfortunate paragraphs concerning the alleged and purely imaginary elopement of Lord Lonsdale with Lady Grace Fane, now countess of Londesborough, that led to the criminal libel suit of Lord Lonsdale against the paper, culminating in the sentence of its editor, Edmund Yates, to a year's imprisonment, owing to his refusal to give the name of the author. The authorship of the paragraph which had been inserted during his absence from England, became known through other sources than Edmund Yates before he had served six months, and the remainder of his sentence was remitted, nor were any steps taken against Lady Stradbroke, beyond the late Queen Victoria declining to receive her any longer at court.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS.

By his own count it is ten years since John Holsham put pen to paper and gave to the world the outcome of his lonely cogitations and lucubrations. The present volume bears the attractive title of "LONEWOOD CORNER" (Dutton), and yet it is full enough of people and life to shake its head at its shelf tag. The loneliness we should judge to be an idiosyncrasy on which the author more or less prides himself.

His peculiar drawling philosophical observations and remembrances he must put on paper, trusting to a world that will understand, for he has no friend thicker than a brother with whom he can share his treasure. The subjective passivity of the book appeals to all of us at times, for there come moments when we like to drowse over the pages, when our minds, upon the framework supplied by another, build their own dreams and with the printed word conjure the happy fleeting memories of our own past.

When in the mood the author of "Lonewood Corner" will enjoy it and himself will perhaps feel called to write one of the commendatory letters the author's previous book elicited. But he must be in the mood for it, else the drawl might banish all thoughts of enjoyment and substitute a tedious hour.

The word "inn" is more likely to suggest to the mind of the average reader "The deacon's wonderful one hoss shay" than that most modern of conveyances, the automobile. Yet the London Queen, in a recent issue, attributes the revival of popularity and interest in the old fashioned inns of England to the tourist who, in his automobile, goes out of the beaten track of the railroad and the modern hotel, and who prefers these historic hostelries to the more luxurious establishments of today.

While in America we cannot, like our English cousins, point to an inn dating back to the time of King John, yet many of the inns of colonial days are of more than passing historical interest, and the tourist through New England will find interesting sketches of these hostelries in Mary C. Crawford's new volume to be published in September by Messrs. L. C. Page & Co., under the title, "Old New England Inns."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. report a fifth printing of "The Price of Silence," by Mrs. M. E. M. Davis, and a fourth printing of "The World's Warrant," by Miss Norah Davis. The limited edition of "Some Unpublished Correspondence of David Garrick," edited by Prof. George P. Baker, is now ready for delivery.

Although Miss Florence Converse's "Long Will" was published as a novel, and read purely as a piece of fictional writing, it could well be used in classes for the valuable light it sheds on England at the time of Chaucer. The university extension classes in economics in the University of Chicago have adopted it because of its description of the peasant revolt.

Of great interest in connection with the tercentenary of Bartholomew Gosnold is John Brereton's account of the voyage contained in "Sailors' Narratives of New England Voyages," which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have recently published. Brereton was a member of the company who made the expedition, and wrote out the account of it for Sir Walter Raleigh. The quaint spelling and phraseology of the time have been retained, and help to invest in a new and romantic atmosphere the familiar places described.

Brereton's enthusiastic delight is unbounded. He gives animated descriptions of dealings with the Indians—whose good qualities of body and mind he unhesitatingly refers to "the holsomnesse and temperature of this Climat"—and stands amazed at the abundance and variety of beasts, birds, fruits, and fishes, with the last of which, he says, "we so pestered our ship that we threw numbers of them ouerboord againe."

The remarkable productiveness of the island now known as Cuttyhunk particularly strikes the historian, while upon entering Buzzard's bay he and his companions "stood a while, like men rauished at the beautie and delicacie of this sweet soil," in comparison with which "the most fertil part of al England is (of it selfe) but barren."

Those whose work, pocketbooks, or inclinations force them to live in the cities must share the anxiety of scientists and enlightened boards of health regarding the problem of getting pure milk. Mr. Hollis Godfrey, who has thoroughly investigated this subject, expresses thereon in the August number of the Atlantic Monthly his matured and reasonable views.

Among others, four facts about milk and its possibilities should be recalled. First, it is used raw, thus affording secure lodgment to dangerous bacteria which cooking would for the most part kill; second, unlike water, its opaque quality conceals dirt, thus making it impossible to reject foul milk on sight; third, although babies are the chief victims, bad milk, mainly through ignorance, is not often enough held to be the cause of death; and, fourth, complete exclusion of bacteria by rigid cleanliness both on the farm and during transportation is a far better and more efficient remedy than their destruction by pasteurization.

In "HALF HOURS IN SOUTHERN HISTORY" Dr. John Lesslie Hall outlines entertainingly the salient features of southern heroism and achievement from the romantic pre-revolutionary period down to and including the era of the civil war, and incidentally states with tolerable succinctness the south's side of the long controversy between the sections. The author is professor of English and of general history in the College of William and Mary. In his preface he says that he has tried to be fair, truthful, and candid; and it is but just to him to say that he shows a pleasing lack of the old characteristic feeling. In dealing with vexed questions he shows no prejudice or rancor.

Everywhere he is dispassionate and impartial, save when he touches upon what he considers as northern interference with southern prerogatives. But even in this most delicate matter the tincture of sectionalism is faint indeed. With equal readiness and enthusiasm he points to the debt of the north to the old south for the latter's assistance in creating the union, and deprecates the flood of biased and inaccurate literature that has kept alive bitter sectional feeling.

In his concluding pages Dr. Hall pleads eloquently for "amor patriæ"—not mere local patriotism, but a love of country possessing the significance of the Roman Patria or the German Fatherland. The volume is illustrated with many portraits of men prominent in southern history. (B. F. Johnson Publishing company, Richmond, Va.)

Possibly two of the most striking things about Miss Sinclair's novel, "The Helpmate," which Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. issue this month, are her first important child character and the three notable women characters, who are the strongest she has yet drawn.

Libel.

"I see by the county paper," said the visitor, "that Jonas Jones, the prosperous druggist of your town, is sojourning——"

"I saw that, too, and it's a libel!" exclaimed the native, with some heat.

"Why, isn't he your druggist?"

"Yes, but this town's too healthy for him to be prosperous."—Catholic Standard and Times.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS.

STRONGHEART.

A Play in Four Acts.

BY

WILLIAM C. DEMILLE.

Presented at McVicker's theater, Chicago, by Edgar Selwyn and his company Aug. 24, 1907. The cast:

Taylor	C. Russell Sage
Ross	Harry Mainhall
Reade	George H. Wender
Thorne	Paul Dickey
Frank Nelson	Purnel Pratt
Dick Livingston	Clifford C. Stork
Billy Saunders	Scott Siggins
Soangatha	Edgar Selwyn
Mrs. Nelson	Delilah Bryant
Molly Livingston	Louise Compton
Dorothy Nelson	Kate McLaurin
Buckley	W. R. Randall

The third visit to Chicago of the De Mille play, "Strongheart," elevates Edgar Selwyn to a stellar position for the first time in his career and also inaugurates the fifty-second season of McVicker's theater. The double event proved sufficiently interesting to attract a capacity audience on the occasion of the opening on Saturday evening, and the welcome accorded the new star and the old play was flattering and unmistakable.

Mr. Selwyn is a young actor who has done much creditable work during the years in which he has supported prominent stars and created important rôles in some of the most successful plays produced in the last decade, and, therefore, his present promotion is not an undeserved honor. He is a player who is ever conscientious, painstaking, and sincere, and it is just these qualities which predominate in his portrayal of the Indian, Soangataha, for the rôle is one which gives little opportunity for the display of unusual brilliancy. He presents a type of the stolid, stoical, imperturbable North American Indian, partially softened and subdued by civilization and contact with the Anglo-Saxon race, and yet at heart true to the tenets of his own people.

In walk, in speech, and in general appearance, Mr. Selwyn's Strongheart is strongly suggestive and true to life, but unfortunately he has not the robustness of physique to properly visualize the popular conception of the football hero of the De Mille play. As yet Mr. Selwyn has not "found himself" entirely in the rôle and a few more performances will give an added assurance and poise and thereby materially strengthen the presentment. That trying scene in the second act, where Soangataha is barred from taking part in the game and is forced to watch the play from the training quarters, is played by Mr. Selwyn with discretion and a fine display of nervous tension which makes the game exceedingly real and carries the interest of the audience along until the climax is reached.

"Strongheart," the play, has all the elements necessary to make it popular with the loyal following at McVicker's. Its first act is breezy, full of atmosphere and jollity, and its second act is steeped in enthusiasm and excitement. The succeeding portions of the play are of a finer weave than the dramatic fabric usually offered at this popular playhouse, and the ethical import does not always find the audience entirely responsive and acquiescent, but nevertheless "Strongheart" is much to their liking.

The company organized to support Mr. Selwyn has been chosen with care and is generally competent and satisfactory. Miss Kate McLaurin has the unsatisfactory rôle of Dorothy and plays it with grace, womanliness, and ease. Miss Louise Compton is the volatile Molly, originally played by her namesake, Miss Louise Drew. C. Russell Sage, as Taylor; Harry Mainhall, as Ross the freshman; Purnell Pratt, as Frank Nelson; and Clifford Stork, as Dick Livingston, form a group of likable, manly young fellows who present the different types of college boys with good effect. George Wender does the part of Reade the "Grind," capitally, and Scott Siggins is a favorite as the genial Billy Saunders, but he does not exhaust the possibilities of the rôle.

The production is as complete and attractive as when the play was presented in the higher priced houses by Robert Edeson, and to those who have not made the acquaintance of "Strongheart" previously, a visit to McVicker's promises an evening of interest and enjoyment.

The Vanderbilt Cup.

Minus the magnetic personality of Miss Elsie Janis, the failings and shortcomings in the Sidney Rosenfeld comedy "The Vanderbilt Cup" show up glaringly and indisputably. Its humor is of the vapid, insipid order which does not bear repetition, and, lacking the many special features which gave it life and animation during its original run at the Colonial, the piece is dull and lusterless as presented by a road company as the current attraction at the Great Northern. The cast is headed by Miss Genevieve Victoria, a diminutive maiden and the possessor of a wee, small voice, who takes the part too seriously and fails to give it the buoyancy and gayety which Miss Janis infused with such success. In the last act Miss Victoria offers a group of imitations of Anna Held, Hattie Williams, and the inevitable George Cohan. Miss Ethel Morton, as Clarinda Larkspur, sang "The Little Chauffeur," which used to be the song hit of the show, without receiving the award of a single encore, but "Somewhere in the World" and others of the catchy musical numbers met with greater favor. Dave Andrada has the Otis Harlan rôle and Earle Dewey is Dexter Joyce, the wine agent.

POWER FROM WASTE GASES.

[From the Engineering Magazine.]

At present about half the coke in Germany is produced in the older style of ovens, which burn all their own gas, and from which only exhaust heat is available for steam generation. The other half of the coke is made in by-product ovens, where the gases are cooled and deprived of their tar, ammonia, benzol, etc., and are then used partly for heating the ovens themselves and for generating steam, any surplus being available for gas engines. By constructing these by-product ovens on the regenerative principle all their gas can be used in gas engines. It has been estimated that the gas and waste heat from the coke ovens in Germany are capable of producing from 500,000 to 600,000 horse power, according as they are used for steam generation or in gas engines or partly for one and partly for the other. Coke oven gas engines with a total capacity of 44,000 horse power were actually in use or in course of construction last summer.

Blast furnace gas is a still more important source of power. With a monthly output of 1,000,000 tons of iron, which was slightly exceeded by the blast furnaces of Germany in 1906, it is found that they generate enough gas to produce 1,000,000 horse power if used in gas engines or about half that amount if burned under boilers in connection with the best reciprocating engines or steam turbines, and only one-third of a million horse power or less if used with steam engines such as are often found at metallurgical works and mines. The blast furnace gas engine has made rapid progress, and in May, 1906, there were in operation or in course of construction in Germany such engines with a total capacity of 372,000 horse power.

[From the St. James' Gazette.]

A comparison of old editions of Scott's "Monastery" with one of later date will reveal a slight alteration in the text of a sentence in the tenth chapter. For the word "morse" another is substituted. A tale of comedy attaches to the word which has gone. "Hardened wretch," says Father Eustace, "art thou but this instant delivered from death, and dost thou so soon morse thoughts of slaughter?" The origin of the word morse seems sorely to have troubled the etymologists.

Two learned correspondents of Notes and Queries, Mr. Wheatley tells us, accounted for the word. One explained it as "to prime," as when one primes a musket, from O. Fr. "amorce," powder for the touchhole (Cotgrave), and the other by "to bite" (Lat. "mordere"); hence "to indulge in biting, stinging, or gnawing thoughts of slaughter."

On the other side were those who said that the word was a misprint for something else. "That the word as a misprint should have been printed and read by millions for fifty years without being challenged and altered exceeds the bounds of probability," exclaimed the apologists for morse. But when the manuscript was examined there "nurse" was the word, plainly written.

NEW LEGAL CODE OF ETHICS

Adoption of Canons Urged on American Bar Association.

MORAL GUIDE FOR LAWYER.

Adoption of Rules of Professional Conduct Advocated by Committee.

Portland, Me., Aug. 25.—A proposed code of professional ethics for the American Bar association will be distributed among the members when they assemble here in annual meeting next Tuesday. This code, as prepared by a committee of lawyers from various sections of the United States, will be submitted at this time merely for the information of the associated members. No effort to have the report adopted will be made at this time, but it is likely that it will be submitted to next year's meeting for such action.

The members of the committee which prepared the code are Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia, James G. Jenkins of Wisconsin, William Wirt Howe of Louisiana, Francis Lynde Stetson of New York, Ezra B. Thayer of Massachusetts, Franklin Ferris of Missouri, Thomas H. Hubbard of New York, Frederick V. Brown of Minnesota, and Lucien H. Alexander of Pennsylvania.

Importance of Code Urged.

Accompanying the code as prepared by the committee is the following report of work already done and contemplated:

"Your committee is of opinion that the adoption of canons of professional ethics by the American Bar association is destined to have a powerful and far reaching influence upon the development of our profession, indeed to so great an extent that it will be difficult to overestimate the importance of the event. We believe that such canons, to become practically effective, should be adopted only after mature and careful deliberation and much fuller consideration on the part of our membership than is possible at one of our annual meetings.

"We believe that your committee, in drafting the code, should have the active assistance of every member of the association with thoughts upon the subject, and that the recommendations which your committee may see fit to make should be considered, not only in connection with what already has been done in those states having codes of ethics but also in the light of what has been said by individuals who have directed their attention particularly to the subject.

Chosen from Many Authorities.

We accordingly annex an appendix containing:

A. That portion of the 1906 report of your committee, dealing with the "advisability and practicability" of the adoption of canons of professional ethics by this association.

B. A compilation of the codes adopted in Alabama, Colorado, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Virginia.

C. The eight canons incorporated in the 18 charter of the Louisiana Bar association.

D. The oath administered to lawyers on admission to the bar in the state of Washington, containing a brief outline of professional duty.

E. The oath prescribed for advocates by the laws of Geneva.

F. The lawyer's prayer, written by Dr. Samuel Johnson, Sept. 26, 1765.

G. The ethical code for lawyers promulgated in 1683 by Christian V. of Denmark and Norway; and

H. Hoffman's Resolutions in Regard to Professional Deportment, published at Baltimore, Md., in 1836, and which are now printed in the Year Book for the bar association of Jacksonville, Fla.

◆

Recommendations by Committee.

The committee then makes the following recommendations:

First—That the committee be continued and enlarged by the addition of Judge Thomas Goode Jones, author of the Alabama code, which, with but few alterations, has been adopted by the bar associations of eleven states; also that Mr. Justice Brewer and the retiring and incoming presidents of the association be declared members of the committee, and also George R. Peck, who, as president of this association in 1905, appointed the initial committee on this subject. Mr. Justice Brewer was named by President Parker a member of the committee, but at the time felt constrained to decline. We have since had the benefit of his advice, and we believe he would now deem it a duty to serve.

Second—That the association reprint Sharswood's essay on professional ethics as a volume supplemental to the report of the proceedings at the 1907 meeting.

Third—That the committee be directed to transmit before Dec. 1, 1907, a copy of the Sharswood reprint, and of this report, to each member of the association, and to request a careful examination of the documents set forth in the appendix to this report, and the submission of opinions and suggestions in the matter of the proposed canons of ethics.

Fourth—That the committee be directed to have the proposed canons of professional ethics drafted by May 1, 1908, and on or before that date to transmit a copy to each member of the association, and to the respective state bar association committees, requesting suggestions and criticism, the final report of the committee to be ready for submission at the 1908 meeting.

TICKLISHNESS.

[From Current Literature.]

When one has found a suitable little playmate, preferably a child of between 3 and 8 years of age, and commences to tickle it, what happens? In the first place, replies Dr. Louis Robinson, famed for his researches into zoölogy, it becomes quite evident that unless the child is in a playful and responsive mood it cannot be tickled.

If it is not well or if a stranger or one whom the child fears or dislikes attempts to tickle it there is no response except resentment at an unwelcome interference. But as soon as a satisfactory understanding is established, the little one laughs and wriggles with delight. Although each movement is an elaborate avoidance of contact, there is a continual invitation to repeat the tickling.

Practically all children, in fact, both by word and act, show plenty of evidence of enjoyment of the game, and invite its continuance indefinitely. Hence, one may say that there exists a distinct appetite for tickling. This, upon close investigation, proves to be as marked and real as any of the recognized animal appetites (all of which, by the way, have an immediate bearing on the continuance of the individual or of the race). This appetite for tickling has this in common with the other appetites, that there are times when desire is absent and provocation fails to take effect. Like the reflexes associated with the gustatory nerve, which make part of the appetite for food, the activity of which depends upon whether we are hungry or the reverse, the reflexes that accompany ticklishness are intermittent.

In addition to this intermittency, ticklishness possesses one noteworthy and essential characteristic which may roughly be compared with the rapid alternations of the electric current. The desire is positive and negative by turns. Contact is wished, invited, and intensely enjoyed up to a certain point. Then it suddenly appears to become distasteful and is avoided with the whole energy of mind and body. Yet the moment that the too vigorous stimulation ceases, the appetite returns, and so the cycle continues.

Way It Works.

EAT, SLEEP, PLAY; OLD AGE CERTAIN

Rockefeller's Medical Guide to Longevity Warns Against Too Much Work.

DON'T DRINK STANDING UP

Sip It Slowly Sitting Down Like the Germans if You Must Have It, Says Dr. Biggar.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Food, sleep, and fresh air comprise the trinity of health, according to John D. Rockefeller's guide to longevity, Dr. Hamilton Biggar. Some of the rules for health laid down by Dr. Biggar are:

Out of door exercise, fresh air and sunshine absolute necessities to the man who would live threescore years and ten.

Learn before it is too late how to live.

Stimulants only for the aged and infirm, if at all—but let a physician prescribe them.

There is no reason, Dr. Biggar declares, why the life of the most strenuous American man of affairs should not be greatly prolonged. In fact, he says that the life of normal man is longer today than it has ever been before.

Food Gulping One Bad Habit.

"The exigencies of modern civilization," he said in an interview today, "impose a penalty upon business men never before known. The ordinary man engrossed in modern business does not eat slowly. He drinks too much ice water. He tries to overcome the strain of commercial life by stimulants. America has become a country of perpendicular drinkers. The Englishman or German sits down at the table and sips his wine or beer at leisure; the American hurries to a bar, takes his drink at a gulp, hurries off to another, and too often repeats the same.

"All this 'haste makes waste,' so far as the human constitution is concerned. Hurried meals and hurried drinks do much to destroy digestion, and Bright's disease often results. I should say, therefore, avoid all stimulants, smoke little—a mild cigar, but preferably a pipe. Be satisfied and not envious of the wealth of your neighbor. Don't worry. As you advance in years shorten your hours of business, but never give it up. Extend your vacation.

Outdoor Exercise the Thing.

"There is nothing so good as out of door exercise. Horseback riding, tennis, golf, polo—all of these are good and healthy and produce longevity. The American man of business needs plenty of fresh air each day, and especially at night. After 50 a man should take from half an hour to an hour's siesta after each midday meal. Relax if you cannot sleep, but do not allow yourself to be disturbed.

"After 40 all men should avoid rich foods, especially 'red meats,' as they are called by medical men—that is, beef and mutton. Eat chicken, fish, and oysters. 'Red meats' clog digestion and greatly injure the kidneys. Besides, they are great promoters of arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of coats of the arteries.

"Coarse cereals, not predigested foods, are of the greatest help in upbuilding the overtired body and stomach. I mean by this coarse oatmeal, cracked wheat, and cornmeal. The predigested foods will make a man of health a dyspeptic.

"Men of wealth are more apt to avoid the rules of health than men in comparatively moderate circumstances. They find too late that late hours and late dinners are but the guide posts to early graves. But the great deterrent to American longevity among men of business is the rush. In New York, in Cleveland, everywhere in America many men used to walk to business, at least part of the way. Nowadays they rush down in an automobile. They are rushed till luncheon. Then they rush to luncheon. It is rush, rush, rush till the break comes."

BLIND IOWAN BID BY QUEEN TO ENTER "CITY OF LIGHT."

"Carmen Sylva," Sovereign of Roumania, Invites Samuel Bowman of Eldora to Join Colony of Sightless.

Eldora, Ia., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Queen Elisabeth of Roumania, who writes under the nom de plume of Carmen Sylva, and who has just established a new charity in Bucharest for the blind known as "The City of Light," has invited an Eldora man, Samuel Bowman, to come to her palace and enter the new home. Bowman is a blind musician and is much pleased over the invitation, which comes personally to him.

Her majesty writes that she has already 160 in the institution, that they come from all parts of the world, that there are ten languages spoken, seven religious creeds observed, and thirteen trades represented.

Mr. Bowman is considering the invitation and probably will be the first American to enter the new "City of Light."

IN THE SHOPS

Brussels and Coarse Nets.

For those who are going to the seashore, where tulles and mousselines so quickly lose their crispness, it is well to know that Brussels net is practically uncrushable. This material in white is becoming to young girls, with the full skirt trimmed about the edge with ruches of liberty or the net put on in some form of the Greek key pattern. Youthful looking bodices are made with berthas, with a smaller copy of the same trimming fastened at the bust by two rosettes of flowered ribbon. A flowered ribbon waistband with long sash ends forms an attractive finish for this frock. The coarse nets are coming in vogue for evening gowns, and they lend themselves to several ingenious and pretty modes of trimming. Net is a good foundation for handwork in a big design, embroidered in heavy silks, in coarse, loose stitches. Ribbon embroidery, with threads of gold and silver, also is much used, and heavy lace motifs and bands are applied. Point d'esprit and fine nets are in favor for lingerie hats, softly shirred around a large, gracefully drooping brim, and massed in pompon effect on top of the crown, with a band of soft satin edging the brim and ribbon of the same shade forming a large bow in the front or huge rosettes on either side of the crown. The delicate shades of pink, blue, lavender, and green are the most chic, although a combination of black and white was noticed on a particularly striking summer girl.

* *

Cheap Shirtwaists.

Shirtwaists are being sold at a great reduction. Some which were $2 are now 98 cents. They are of fine batiste with yoke collar, and cuffs of pin tucks, and pretty lace edging finishes the collar and cuffs. Others of pink and blue batiste with numerous tuckings, and French knots and beading, cost $1.49.

August Furniture Bargains.

The furniture stores and departments are humming with business. The daily ads give one a hint of the many bargains, but they do not enumerate one-half of those to be found on every side that make it really worth one's while to take advantage of the big cut in prices.

Fire Screens.

For the nursery or for any room where an open fire is used, which must be left unwatched at times, there are screens of brass wire affording complete protection and safety from sparks, which cost $7.50, and are attractively trimmed with copper.

Egg Variations.

There are a good many articles of food which are digested easily but which lack flavor and the palate easily tires of them. One of these is eggs, and the difficulty can be overcome by serving them with some decided flavor. Tomato sauce, anchovy toast, stewed celery, and many other things will suggest themselves to the mind of the housekeeper who is seeking to make this easily digested nutritive food acceptable to some member of her family. Sometimes it can be flavored with a sprinkling of cheese, sometimes worked into the diet in some other form as custards. The principle in dealing with the simple foods suitable for invalids or people who have some difficulty in nutrition is to use flavors in different forms with discretion to avoid tiring the taste and yet give the amount of nutrition necessary under cover of different flavors.

Lotion Keeps Hair in Curl.

To keep hair in curl, try the following lotion: Gum arabic, one ounce; good moist sugar, one-half ounce; pure hot water, three-quarters of a pint. Dissolve all together and when cool add alcohol, two ounces; bichlorate of mercury, six grains; salammoniac, six grains; lastly, add enough water to make the whole measure one pint. The mercury and salammoniac should be dissolved in the alcohol before mixing. Perfume with cologne. Moisten the hair with this solution before putting on curlers. M. L. Branch.

Oily Skin.

Deny yourself all rich foods, gravies, pastry, and overdone meats. Eat simple things, as fresh vegetables, fruits, and meat once a day; also little butter. Use the complexion brush, scrubbing the face with pure castile soap, taking care to rinse it well afterward. An old remedy for oily skin is: Pulverized borax, one ounce; pure glycerin, two ounces; camphor water, not spirits of camphor, two quarts. The skin should be bathed with this lotion two or three times a day and the treatment persisted in for three months at least.

With the Girl Workers

Woman "Boss" Has Hard Lot.

One of the hardest positions in which a woman worker can be placed is to "boss" male help employed in any department of which she may have charge. On one occasion I had charge of a photographic printing room, several miles from the downtown headquarters of the firm. I had one young woman assistant, congenial and agreeable. The darkroom man usually employed in the downtown department under the immediate supervision of the manager was sent out to help me during a lull in his part of the work. Instead of helping me he seemed to regard himself as on a vacation and proceeded to play. When I suggested certain lines of work in which he could assist he said "it made his head ache." So he occupied himself with his personal correspondence, while my department was charged with his valuable time and help. I entered into no unseemly "scrap" with him, but appealed to the manager as to what he was supposed to do and if I, being in charge, had not the right to apportion the work. The reply was short and to the point—that the man would receive "such instructions as would insure future obedience." Thereafter he reported for orders and did what I requested, including the tasks which had formerly threatened to prostrate him. Furthermore, I will add that he bore me no malice, as he knew he was in the wrong and that I had asked nothing unreasonable. Jane M. Drysdale.

Escape Burdens by More Culture.

Prominent business houses that have established libraries for the benefit of their employés directly contribute to the evolution of the working girl's lot. By thus nourishing our minds our increased capacity may result in their own interest, but at the same time contact with great minds and great problems in history and literature will make us feel more keenly the narrowness of our positions. Could any girl swallow the salt and pepper of Carlyle or Ibsen and remain a passive nine hour nonentity without feeling the worm turn a little? She would be willing to admit the sanctity of work and the joy of creating, but doubly willing to crusade against "grinding" for the mere privilege of keeping alive. A girl of such tendencies, however, might conquer adversity almost as readily as organize a strike. Hence it is not until we all become a little more philosophical and consequently more sensitive and less able to endure the long mechanical routine of office and shop that our employers will have to respond to an inevitable condition and grant us more time for athletic pleasure and artistic creation. And if the law of evolution holds true this absolutely is certain. Clara R.

Married Worker Finds Happiness.

A few weeks after my marriage I secured an office position at a moderate salary. I was discouraged at first, but my surroundings were pleasant, so I struggled on. My efforts were in a short time repaid by an advanced salary, which incited me to do my best. I soon began to enjoy my work and to take great interest in it, striving at all times to do it as I would have it done.

To do myself justice I found that many outside pleasures would have to be sacrificed, but during the day my interest is centered in my work, and my husband and our one room flat, where we do light housekeeping, need my attention evenings. Thus, instead of dreading each coming day I look forward to it with pleasure. G. M.

IN THE SEWING ROOM

Handy Pincushion.

Dressmakers and seamstresses often have the dangerous habit of putting pins in the mouth. This habit not only is dangerous but is unhealthy. A flat pin cushion should be one of the tools for every sewing machine. It should have a loop of ribbon sewed to one corner, which may be hung over the neck or fastened to the belt. It is an absolute necessity to the fitter. A good stuffing may be made for it by using hair combings which have been cleaned, as they are light and will hold the pins securely.

* *

Plaiting for Blouse.

Taking a strip of selvage for that attractive little plaiting so much used on the front of the fashionable blouse is not a new scheme, but it certainly is a good one to follow. The cost of having it plaited is only 2 cents a yard, so for a small sum one of the smart waists can be copied.

* *

Home Made Handkerchiefs.

Four dainty handkerchiefs can be made from a man's large size handkerchief, cut in quarters. Each quarter or handkerchief will have two sides to be hemstitched to correspond with the opposite sides.

With the addition of tiny French knots in these hems, in colored thread if desired, or a daintily embroidered initial in one corner and a lace edge, one well will be repaid for the few busy moments by four attractive handkerchiefs with little expense.

Draw tight and tack on bottom of box, using one straight piece of cloth. Take the rim from lid and cover the lid in same manner. Put on two small brass hinges and you have a useful and ornamental box. It may be used in bedroom instead of a chair. Mrs. W. C. Chesbro.

HINTS for ENTERTAINMENTS

Farewell Party.

A young belle, who was going abroad for an extensive trip, was the guest of honor at this quaint luncheon. A toy express wagon piled high with tiny trunks was the centerpiece. Little suit cases bought in the toy department had real labels posted on the sides with the guest's name written on them and were the place cards. At the honor guest's place was a little silver cup in a case of leather. The maid brought on a tray a steamer letter from each guest, to be read during the voyage. Before leaving the table the express wagon was unloaded and the trunks passed around. In them were found mints and in the suit cases salted nuts. Mrs. Hall.

IN THE NURSERY

Child's Diet.

At the age of 2 years nearly all children should have a small amount of meat, beginning at about once in two weeks and gradually increasing it to a small amount daily. A delicately broiled lamb chop is considered the most digestible and nutritious meat for children, and can be given with absolute safety. It is well to alternate the lamb with beef tenderloin, boiled or broiled; fowl, boiled or broiled; whitefish, or rare beefsteak. Vegetables should be allowed after the child is 2 years old and should consist of asparagus tips, spinach, tender string beans, and peas forced through a strainer. Always avoid the use of salted meats, pork, veal, and coarse vegetables, such as beets, carrots, turnips, and all fried vegetables. Do not give cheese, pastry, rich desserts, condiments, coffee, tea, iced water, and alcoholic stimulants. Mrs. W. H. Woodruff.

ST. GAUDENS' TASKS ALMOST COMPLETED BEFORE DEATH.

Labor of Reproducing Models and Drawings Destroyed by Fire Bravely Undertaken by Late Sculptor.

Cornish, N. H., Aug. 25.—After the fire which burned his large studio here and destroyed models, drawings, and work in all stages of completion about three years ago, Augustus Saint Gaudens, the sculptor, whose death occurred recently, labored incessantly, although in feeble health, to get the old work along and keep up with new commissions constantly coming in.

He worked until within two weeks of his death, the last large work coming from his hands being a statue of Phillips Brooks, the small plaster cast of which is now being enlarged in plastoline.

Work on the allegorical figures which will be placed at the entrance of the Boston public library has progressed so as to have the rough sketches made in plastoline.

The McGee medallion, with figures of Plenty, with a fountain at the bottom and a basrelief of Chris McGee, the donor, at the top, which will be placed opposite the Carnegie institute in Pittsburg, is done in plaster, and work on enlargement in plastoline is going on.

The Lincoln statue which is to be placed at the entrance of the John Crerar library in Chicago, and the statue of Marcus A. Hanna, to be placed in the park system of Cleveland, O., have been done in bronze and will soon be put in their respective sites.

The statue of Charles Stewart Parnell, which is to be erected in Mr. Saint Gaudens' native city of Dublin, has already been shipped to that place and will soon form a part of the imposing monument to be erected to the Irish leader.

To Keep Health Through Pure Air

Professor Fisher of Yale says the best way to fight consumption is by keeping the air of our dwellings pure. "We must substitute electric light for all other forms of illumination," he says. Electric light leaves the oxygen in the air of our rooms unconsumed. That's why it is so healthful. Every one has it within his power to use this means of warding off disease. Victory Over Yanks and Athletics' Defeat Leave Narrow Margin.

ELBERFELD AIDS RESULT.

Contest Seems Lost When Foeman Bungles and Turns Tide; Score, 3 to 2.

White Sox standing .... .59829
Athletics standing .... .59821

By winning yesterdaay from New York, while the Athletics won one game and lost another at St. Louis, the White Sox regained the lead in the American league by the smallest percentage, probably, that ever has separated the two leaders of either of the major leagues. Surely it is the smallest difference that ever existed between the two leaders at so late a period in the league race.

To discover the fact that the White Sox lead in the league race this morning you have to carry the division of "games played" into "games won" out to the fifth figure before learning which is ahead. The Sox have played five more games than the Athletics and by dividing their total games, 117, into their 70 victories a percentage is discovered of .59829. The Athletics' 112 games divided into their 67 victories reveals a percentage of .59821.

BY CHARLES DRYDEN.

Hooray for K. Elberfeld, our worthy benefactor! When the sting of defeat was about to pierce the vitals of the Sox the genial shortstop emitted a heave that was a bird of paradise. Two runs bubbled across, and the champions cashed by a score of 3 to 2. An even break at St. Louis enabled the Sox to pass the Athletics and take first place.

What makes the climax glitter more brightly is the fact that the winner had one man down in the ninth before Newton blew. The stuff the doctor unloaded from his port gangway had buffaloed the Sox with three singles and the big show displayed all the goose marks of a shutout. But the cohorts of the boss del mundo must not be numbered with the slain until the last gent is laid out. Give them a leg to stand on and the other fellows must keep an eye peeled.

About 16,000 patriots were standing on both legs chewing wind and spitting the same at Dr. E. Newton when the time came for him to pronounce the benediction. A slight dent appeared in the tumult when Rohe batted for Walsh and skied to right. The multitude felt harshly toward Willie Keeler, but he must do his duty. Hahn pasted a single over second. The doctor made a grab, but the ball was on its way before he put his mitt down.

Sets the Bugs Buzzing.

Jones was in a fair way to whiff when he boosted a foul toward the fringe of society standing on the grass. Thomas reached the ball and muffed it. The waves of sound twisted the sphere from his eager hooks. Glad to be alive once more, Jones whaled away and pasted another single to center.

To the fair imitation of a bughouse gone dotty, Mr. Isbell poled a much needed single that tailled Hahn and moved Jones to third. At that thrilling period Elberfeld hastened to the side of the doctor and begged him to retain his nerve.

"Be cam," said the Tabasco Kid, "don't let them get your goat."

Just to show he was in full possession of his mental facilities Dr. Newton drew a brunette handkerchief from his pistol pocket and swabbed his brow. Donohue came up and sacrificed, which many said was a bad break. He bunted to Newton, and the out put runners on second and third with two dead. Jiggs did the right thing after all, for had Jones scored on Isbell's contemplated steal it meant a tie score.

While Davis was rubbing some dirt on himself at the pan Elberfeld once more cautioned Newton not to lose his noodle. The Tabasco athlete was so long delivering good advice that O'Loughlin had to shoo him back on the job.

Two Sprint to Cover.

On the first ball pitched Davis rolled a sharp grounder to short. Elberfeld picked it up and dented the dirt ten feet in front of Moriarity. The sphere became tangled up in the first sacker's person, and while he was looking for it Jones and Isbell sprinted into camp. Thereupon Mr. Moriarity grew fatigued and quit looking for the ball. Before the athletes could disperse the diamond was full of howling fanatics. The overflow crowd swamped the works to congratulate Davis and shower friendly pats upon the quivering back of K. Elberfeld, who dodged in and out on his way to the coop.

"Good boy, Kid," said the bugs. "We never could have done it but for you. Welcome to our fair city."

Mr. Elberfeld's replies to this repartee are unfit for publication, and on that account we omit them from a clean family journal. On his farm at Suffern, N. Y., the peppery little shortstop maintains a ten horse power phonograph. He will prepare a speech telling himself what he thinks of himself and let it run all winter.

Events Are Exciting.

The events leading up to the loud explosion were brief but exciting. Walsh was doing first rate, like he always does. Luck attended the Yankees in the opener, and they eked one run in this wise: Hoffman walked and was advanced by Keeler. The out of Elberfeld at first shoved Hoffman to third. Moriarity grounded to third. Just as Tannehill was about to hook the ball it rose up and bounded over his tent for a single, scoring Hoffman. The lumpy Laporte lined to Isbell. That lone tally assumed vast proportions as the combat moved along. Walsh had the foe anchored, and the Sox could do nothing with Newton. After two gone in the third Walsh smote a single 200 feet long and a foot wide. At least it sounded that wide. Conroy was lifted off his feet taking the ball on the bound. Had the way been clear the ball would have traveled to Chicago avenue. Moriarity was passed in the fourth, and Laporte thumped to Davis for a double play. Another run in the seventh seemed to cinch the fate of the Sox. Moriarity walked and stole as Laporte struck out. Williams pasted a single that Isbell knocked down. The ball rolled far enough to let Moriarity score. Conroy's single was followed by another from Thomas, who drove his to center. Jones came up on the gallop, lined the ball to Sully, and they potted Williams at the home station. Newton struck out.

Fails to Burst the Game.

Cheerful Charles, the Robust Rallier, trotted a heat in the local eighth in the hope of busting up the game. He batted for Dougherty and was tossed out by Williams. After Hickman had passed away the next two went the usual route. Newton pitched a strong game until the bats of the Sox shattered him in the ninth. Score:

NOTES OF THE WHITE SOX.

By hard fighting the champions managed to tie the leaders for top honors.

There will be no baseball in Chicago until next Sunday, when both teams will be at home.

It may be fashionable to arrive late, but most of the laggards lose out on the seat proposition.

Late comers enjoyed the luxury of box seats. They carried the boxes and placed them subject to police restrictions.

The Sox were so delighted they stood Hahn on his head in the clubhouse for touching off the rally in the ninth.

While the crowd was leaving the yard a nature faker hung up a bunko score alleging that St. Louis had beaten the Athletics 3 to 0.

Mr. Kleinow was among those present wearing his nose in a sling. Aside from a slight dent in his air intake the little catcher suffers no inconvenience.

The Sox have but two more Sunday games at home. They meet Detroit Sept. 8, and Cleveland will play on the south side on the following Sunday.

O'Loughlin's diaphragm started to sink in the fifth round, carrying his voice with it. A cup of water from the Chicago keg floated the diaphragm and the ump was able to proceed.

Billy Sullivan announces the receipt of one bottle of oil as a reward for the triple he clouted in Saturday's game. The professor hastened to amend the bonus schedule so as to include triples.

The Sox will carry but three pitchers on the trip to Cleveland this week—Walsh, Ed Walsh, and Mr. Walsh. On Wednesday Walsh will pitch the opening game, and on Thursday Ed Walsh will toil. Friday is an open date. Mr. Walsh is billed to pitch the last game, on Saturday.

DIVIDE ON A DOUBLE HEADER.

St. Louis and Philadelphia Break Even, Former Taking First, 2 to 1, and Latter Second, 1 to 0.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 25.—St. Louis again divided a double header with Philadelphia this afternoon, both games being pitchers' battles. The first score resulted 2 to 1 in favor of St. Louis, and Philadelphia won the second game, 1 to 0. In the first game a wild pitch by Bender let in two runs in the ninth inning after the Indian had replaced Dygert. Scores:

DETROITS BEAT THE BOSTONS.

Killian Is in Good Form, While Pruitt Is Hit Hard—Score Is Seven to One.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 25.—Killian was in good form and Boston found it impossible to bunch hits off him. The visitors filled the bases with no one out in the sixth, but a double play killed the opening. Pruitt was hit hard, but Kroh showed well. Jones' batting and base running featured the contest. TROUBLE AFTER THE GAME.

[BY LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.]

Wausau, Wis., Aug. 25.—Believing the decisions of the umpire favored the visitors, the crowd at the ball park overran the ground this afternoon and assaulted Umpire Bush. He was being roughly handled when rescued by the police and escorted to his hotel, followed by a hooting mob. The game was between the local team and La Crosse and at the end of the twelfth inning, with the score a tie at three each, the umpire called the game with an hour of daylight remaining. The game was exciting and set the 1,500 spectators on edge. Score:

UMPIRE STONED AT GREEN BAY.

Crowd Objects to Order Banishing Player, and Sheriff's Deputies Rush to Official's Rescue.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Sheriff's officers escorted Umpire Anderson off the field to his hotel today to prevent mob violence. The wrath of the crowd was aroused by his decision in calling Smith safe at second in the eighth inning. Anderson ordered Boyle to the bench for objecting to the decision, and Manager Corrigan refused to have him taken from the game. Anderson then forfeited the game to Madison. The crowd surged upon the field and clubs and stones were hurled at the umpire. The officers went to his assistance before he was injured. Score:

CURB BIT FOR ANSON'S COLTS.

Prancing Youngsters Are Thoroughly Tanned in Their Own Corral by the Pirates.

The Pirates defeated Anson's Colts yesterday at Anson park by 10 to 5. In the first inning ten men went to bat, a base on balls, three hits, and a hit by pitcher scoring six runs for Roy Clark's team. Bert Cunningham pitched his usual steady game and was well supported by his teammates. Ware's fielding and base running was a feature, that player stealing home with the ball in the pitcher's hand. Eckersall, Grannan, and Chouinard carried off the fielding honors. Score:

Stahl's men looked dangerous only in the third, when they had the bases full and one out, but Norman tightened up and retired the side on infield outs. Score:

CUBS GET LICKING AT PROVIDENCE.

Minor Leaguers Shut Out Chicago Team in an Exhibition Game, 5 to 0.

PLAYERS ENJOY OUTING.

Champs to Play Double Header in Boston Today, Ending Series There.

BY SY.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—The trip of the Chicago Cubs to Rocky Point for an exhibition game with the Providence Eastern leage team today proved a glorious outing for the players, all but five of whom were taken along, but the game itself resulted in a licking for the champions by a score of 5 to 0.

The Cubs were up against Mack, a farmhand belonging to the Philadelphia Nationals, who proved some pitcher and held them down to four scattered hits, none of which came anywhere near producing a run. The Cub regulars were practically intact, yet found themselves unable to hit the ball safe, although they were playing on a diamond which was rockier than Rocky Point.

The home team landed on Jack Taylor heavily in the second inning, six swats, one of them for three bases, being good for five runs and the game. In the other seven innings Taylor had the Grays helpless and some of those five runs never would have scored but for errors, largely due to the Cubs' unfamiliarity with the hills and hollows composing the playing field.

Long Jump for Victors.

The Providence team made a jump from Rochester home and back to Buffalo in order to play this game, and fine weather brought a large crowd to the Sunday resort.

The Cubs made the trip to Providence by train, then boarded a special trolley car for the fifteen mile ride to the point. After the defeat they had a plunge in the ocean and then sat down to a special shore dinner ordered in advance and superintended by Secretary Williams. The players returned full of beautiful scenery, salt water, clams, and lobsters, and no one remembered how the game came out except Acting Manager Sheckard, who is yet new to bearing the burden of defeat.

Tinker staid in Boston nursing a charley horse, and Slagle got back into harness to give Joe the day off. The others who did not make the trip were Brown, Pfiester, and Lundgren.

Cubs in Boston Today.

Today the Cubs will wind up their year's series in Boston with a double header, after which they jump to Brooklyn for three games. Brown will pitch one of tomorrow's games, if his arm is right, and Lundgren or Pfiester the other.

On the team's return to Boston tonight a telegram from Pat Moran announced the death of his mother this morning at his home in Fitchburg. She had been seriously ill for some time, and Moran was excused from today's trip, so that he might go home on Saturday and be at her bedside.

President Murphy immediately wired the Cubs' heartfelt sympathy and made arrangements for a floral tribute to be sent for the funeral. A wire was also sent to Chicago ordering Otis to report to the club in Brooklyn.

M'CAMMENT IS NO HIT PITCHER

Elgin Nationals Fail to Get a Single Safety Off Lawndale Twirler.

SCORE OF GAME, 4 TO 0.

Finest Kind of Support Is Given to the Slabman for the Ryanites.

Lon McCamment of the Lawndales broke into the ranks of the no hit pitchers yesterday by twirling a game at Lawndale park in which the Elgin Nationals did not get a single safety, the home club winning the game by the score of 4 to 0. Throughout "Mac" pitched great ball, while the infield did some wonderful work behind him, Otto Dicke and Jack Campion picking up grounders in every imaginable fashion, while Jack Messerly's pickups on bad throws were little short of sensational.

Eddie Heimerl, the southpaw, twirled great ball for the Elgin Nationals, but in the sixth inning he was touched up for three hits, which, with a wild throw by himself, gave Jimmy Ryan's men three runs. Score:

Art Wallace, a new member of the Oak Leas, was the star of the game, making three hits and saving his side from a shutout by scoring on Joe Taylor's single to right field. Score:

Davenport, Ia., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Ten thousand people today witnessed Barney Oldfield's effort to break the one mile auto track record of :56½, held by himself. Oldfield made three attempts, his best time being 1:00 1-5.

Pequod Winner of Yacht Race.

Pequod, owned by D. C. W. Pinckard, won the 18 foot class race in the C. A. A. regatta on Saturday, scoring the first win for the Howell cup. Seminole erroneously was marked as the winner.

MIGHTY COLIN TO FIND HIS MATCH?

Meelick Thought to Be Good Enough to Win $40,000 Futurity Race.

IS COLT OF RARE SPEED.

Radtke Says the Youngster Is the Best He Has Thrown Leg Over This Year.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—In Meelick, a strapping and classy looking chestnut colt, by Planudes—Ilithyia, John E. Madden believes he has a Futurity candidate that may lower the pride of the champion and undefeated Colin, if next Saturday's $40,000 race at Sheepshead Bay should be run on a fast track. Jockey Herman Radtke, who rode Meelick in the six furlong race for the rich Hopeful stakes on Aug. 17, says that performance of the colt can be thrown out because he was running on the rails in the deepest going of a muddy track.

"It was wonderful that he could keep up with the leaders at all in the early part of the race, because the mud was twice as deep along the rails, where he was running, as on any other part of the track," Radtke said.

He pronounces Meelick a colt of extraordinary speed and by far the best youngster he has ridden this year.

Meelick's weight in the big race next Saturday will be 119 pounds, as he is entitled to a breeding allowance of three pounds. He will meet Fair Play at the same weight, Colin at 125, and Jim Gaffney at 130 pounds. Colin, of course, looks like the winner on a fast track. There is no getting away from the superiority of James R. Keene's marvelous youngster, and nothing but the worst kind of racing luck seems able to prevent his winning.

Can Beat Fair Play.

That he can give Fair Play the six pounds there is little doubt, and few seriously entertain the idea of Frank Farrell's grand youngster, Jim Gaffney, successfully conceding five pounds to the Keene champion, if the race be truly run and both escape interference and misfortune. But Colin may have to extend himself to the limit through the last quarter if Madden and Radtke are correct in their estimate of Meelick.

Considering the great width of the Futurity course, the fact that it is almost a straightaway, and the probability this year's field will be much smaller than usual, it seems reasonable to count upon the race being truly run—at any rate so far as a colt with so much speed as Colin is concerned. He is a good post horse and a quick breaker, and the turf has yet to see a 2 year old this season that can outrun him at any part of a race unless his rider is instructed not to force the pace.

The ease with which Colin held such an extra fast colt as Uncle for the first half mile of their race for the Saratoga Special should insure the champion being right up with the front runners in the early part of the race for the Futurity. And the ease with which he ran around Uncle as they turned into the home stretch and then raced away from Hildreth's fast colt should insure Colin being able to draw clear of the Futurity field before the famous "elbow" in the course is reached. From the elbow to the winning post what colt can catch this amazingly high class son of Commando?

Opinion of "Kid" Weller.

If Meelick can race stride for stride with Colin all the way and beat him then John Madden certainly has another wonder. B. J. Weller, who probably has no superior in the country in the art of making future books on great turf events, says if he were booking now on the Futurity Colin would be an even money favorite, Meelick or no Meelick. Also, he says, Fair Play is apt to be favorite the day of the race if the going is heavy, as he does not consider the possibility of Jim Gaffney conceding Fair Play eleven pounds on any kind of a track.

Either Restigouche or Peter Quince probably will be the Keene second string, or he may start both, besides Colin. By winning last Saturday's $10,000 stake race Restigouche has incurred a penalty of four pounds for the Futurity. Being a gelding, as well as entitled to a breeding allowing of three pounds, his weight will not exceed 120 pounds. Peter Quince is a maiden, but he will not get off with less than 117 pounds by the conditions of next Saturday's great race.

Peter's effort last Saturday is regarded pretty much as only an "airing" by many turfmen, despite the fact that from a slow beginning he rushed right after and caught the leaders in less than three furlongs. However, as the winner's time was nearly three seconds slower than Restigouche's, and Jim Gaffney and Fair Play ran the same distance in the stake race an hour previous, Peter Quince and his victor, Fort Johnson, will have to improve immensely to be formidable in the Futurity.

Fort Johnson on Edge.

Fort Johnson is seasoned, and therefore is not likely to show any great improvement in a week, and, although he is said to be a sure starter, he need not be considered seriously as a probable winner of the Futurity. Peter Quince may improve considerably, especially in getting away from the barrier quickly and carrying his speed further. Ben Fleet was beaten so thoroughly in last Saturday's stake race that he seems to be outclassed in the Futurity field. But he no doubt will go to the post for the big race.

Fred Burlew says Chapultepec is a sure starter, if nothing happens to the colt between now and the time for the race. This one seems to have trained off badly, for he has not been showing his great flight of speed in his recent races here.

Bar None is a fast and classy colt that often acts disgracefully at the barrier. If he gets away well he is likely to beat a good many more than beat him when they come tearing down the chute at the bay next Saturday.

EASTERN TURF TRUCE LIKELY.

Probable That Jockey Club Will Make Terms with James Butler of the Yonkers Track.

New York, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—It may be stated with authority that if there is a truce between the Jockey club and the Empire City track it will not materialize until after the merits of the case have been passed upon by the Court of Appeals. It is known the racing commission and the Jockey club wish to find out just what the status of the present law is, and that they will conduct a legal fight to a finish, in spite of the great success of the Empire City meeting and the established fact that the metropolitan public wants racing here during the month of August.

But in spite of the plans to carry the case to the Court of Appeals, it may be said there is not the same bitterness of feeling among the members of the Jockey club toward James Butler that existed one month ago. The fact that Mr. Butler has conducted the sport at Yonkers on a broad, clean, sportsmanlike basis, has made some of the turf powers believe that the owner of the Empire City track is the right sort of a man to have interested in racing.

It is known the Jockey club is unalterably opposed to the presence in the east of a western turf element, which probably would jump at a chance to remain permanently at Empire City, but which would be forced to go back home in the event of peace being declared and the admission of Empire City to the fold.

It is estimated the Empire City meeting will net close to $100,000 in profits. Mr. Butler stands ready to spend this money, and much more besides, in making his track one of the finest in America. It is also possible that under favorable circumstances Mr. Butler will in due time go into the breeding industry on a larger scale and also race a formidable string of horses.

FAST NAGS AT NARRAGANSETT.

Grand Circuit Harness Races at Providence Track Expected to Result in Lowering of Records.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 25.—About 300 horses have arrived in the last few days to take part in the grand circuit races at Narragansett Park. The last arrivals from Readville came Saturday, among them being Highball and Sonoma Girl.

Many of the faster horses have been in training at the race track for the last week. In this batch are Wentworth, 2:04¼, Oro, and Norman. Horsemen expect records to go by the board every day, especially on Tuesday, Park Brew day. This, it is thought, will prove the greatest race held on any track and a slashing of the world's pacing record will not surprise any one. Audubon Boy, 1:59¼, and Bolivar, 2:00¾, as well as Ecstatic, Grattan, and many others of the fastest trotters are entered.

SHAMROCKS WIN IN GREAT GAME.

Defeat Chicagos by Playing Brilliant Lacrosse in Cup Series, 9 to 4.

BROWN STAR PERFORMER.

Former Canadian Shows Wonderful Work in Defense of His Goal.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

	Played.	Won.	Lost.	Goals for.	Goals ag'st.
Shamrocks	5	3	2	36	31
Calumets	4	2	2	33	31
Chicago	5	2	3	34	41

Playing aggressive and accurate lacrosse, the Shamrock team yesterday defeated the Chicago team at the west side ball park, 9 goals to 4, and took the lead in the race for the Comiskey cup.

With the knowledge that defeat was equivalent to the loss of the cup both sides played with determination, and while the battle was scrappy and at times rough, the men were kept well in check by Referee Beaton. Out from many fine pieces of play the wonderful defense work of Brown, the Chicago goalkeeper, stood prominently.

Former Canadian Plays Brilliantly.

The former Toronto, St. Catherines, and St. Paul player was a stonewall, and it was only by getting close on him the Shamrock players were able to count. Time and again he stopped dangerous shots for the Shamrock men were playing brilliantly.

Kelly's men, with Grogan back in the defense and McArthur and Sharkey, the recent arrivals from Canada, in the lineup, played their best game of the year. With this well rounded out team the Shamrocks are likely to make the Calumets hustle in their final game in the cup series. The whole side played finely with Knapp leading the attack and Kelly the defense. Outside of Brown, the defense play of Richards and the attack of Powers and Gaiseford were the features of the Chicagos' work. The last two men fairly played themselves off their feet in the first two periods, the other home players not working hard.

Shamrocks' Combination Good.

Early in the first period it was seen the Shamrock combination was working well. Masterson scored in four minutes, but Gaiseford equalized, and then Shaver put his side in the lead. Powers counted for Chicago early in the second period, but after that the Shamrocks kept their goal intact and Shaver and O'Malley counted at the other end. The score was 4 to 2 at the end of this period.

Knapp shone in the third quarter, netting three goals, while O'Malley got another. Each side scored once in the final period. Morrison and Sharkey had a mixup in the third period, and both were put off. The crowd was the biggest of the season. Lineup:

Shamrocks [9].		Chicago [4].
McKay	Goal	Brown
Grogan	Point	Joyce
Masterson	Cover point	Courtice
Kelly	First defense	Richards
McArthur	Second defense	Kearney
Keaveney	Third defense	Butterworth
Farrar	Center	Morrison
Gougeon	Third home	P. Myiou
Knapp	Second home	A. Myiou
Sharkey	First home	Gaiseford
O'Malley	Inside home	Powers
Shaver	Outside home	Fogg

Goals—First quarter, Masterson, Shaver, Gaiseford. Second quarter, Gougeon, O'Malley, Powers. Third quarter, Knapp [3], O'Malley. Fourth quarter, Knapp, Powers. Referee—Beaton. Judge of play—Anthony.

COMMENT ABOUT THE BOXERS.

Jack ("Twin") Sullivan in the City—Neary-Tancel Fight Interests the Chicago Fans.

Jack Twin Sullivan passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to the coast, where he expects to meet the winner of the Schreck-Kaufman fight which takes place the 29th of this month. Sullivan looked well, and declared he was feeling fine.

A large delegation of Chicago fight fans will go up to Milwaukee Labor day to see the battle between Charlie Neary and Eddie Tancel. Every Chicago fightgoer has at some time or other seen Neary, and they all admire him as a strong, game fighter, and a man who delights the crowd, winning or losing. Only a few of them have ever seen Tancel in action. He is a dark mystery—reported to be a veritable demon, but really almost unknown excepting to those who saw him get busy at the C. A. A. and Coliseum tourneys. Neary and Tancel, from all accounts, ought to put up the kind of mill that draws howls of delight from the beholders. There will be no fancy work, no dainty sparring. They will simply stand toe to toe, wallop and slam, and the stronger of the pair should win some time before the finish of the road is reached. Both are training hard.

Illinois Jack, a colored welterweight at the Douglas club, Thirty-fifth street and Wabash avenue, is looking for matches with any man in his class.

NEW SOCCER LEAGUE PLANNED.

Local Football Players to Meet Sept. 6 for the Purpose of Forming an Organization.

Local soccer football players interested in the formation of a Saturday afternoon league will hold a meeting on Sept. 6 for the purpose of organizing. So rapidly has the game grown in this vicinity that J. P. Vallely of the Douglas Park team expects that at least eight of the twelve teams not connected with the two Sunday leagues will get into line.

Among these are the Shamrocks, Douglas Parks, Englewood High school, Nelson Morris & Co., Calumets, Melrose Park, Chicago Cliftonvilles, Elmhurst college, and Thistles. In addition several of the clubs with teams in the Sunday leagues are expected to enter. W. T. Norris, 46 Lexington street, is temporary secretary of the promoting committee.

The Shamrock club, organized last spring, and which now has a membership of forty, has elected the following officers: William Houston, captain; J. McClean, vice captain; T. Norris, secretary and treasurer; W. Boyle, T. Newell, and T. Norris, executive committee.

Notes of the Golfers.

Junior golfers at Westward Ho will start play today for their annual championship.

The second annual tournament of the Printers and Publishers' association will be held tomorrow at Exmoor.

Friends of Perley Lowe, the veteran Westward Ho player, were amused to read in the program of the Lake Geneva tournamnt that the Northwoodside cup was won in 1906 by Mr. "Pearly" Lowe.

WOMEN GOLFERS WILL PLAY TODAY.

Fifth Annual Championship of W. W. G. A. to Open at Midlothian.

SIXTY-FOUR TO QUALIFY.

Contest for Team Title Also Scheduled; Look for Chicagoans to Win.

Play in the fifth annual championship of the Women's Western Golf association will start this morning at 9 o'clock at the Midlothian Country club with the qualifying round for championship, association trophy, Midlothian, and solace cups.

Sixty-four players will qualify in four flights of sixteen each, the lowest sixteen being eligible for the championship, which carries with it possession of the W. A. Alexander trophy for one year. In conjunction with the qualifying round the western team championship will be played by quartets of four, the two teams having the lowest totals playing off later in the week at match play.

With only four entries from outside cities it looks as if the championship will be retained in Chicago. Mrs. Charles L. Dering, the present holder, is not in the best of practice, but is nevertheless a strong candidate. Miss Myra Helmer has of late been doing some splendid play in practice, and if she can perform as well through the tournament she ought at least to come through to the final.

Miss Marion Warren of Edgewater has not been seen much in competition on local courses, but has been playing in Michigan and is expected to finish well up. On recent performances Miss Ruth Steele, Miss Young, and Mrs Alexander are possibilities, while Miss Sallie Ainslie, who at times plays brilliantly, must not be overlooked. Of the outside players Mrs. Edmund T. Perkins of Los Angeles is conceded to have the best chance.

A handicap for men scoring in the morning will be the afternoon event.

GOSSIP OF THE TENNIS COURT.

Final Matches in National Tournament Scheduled for Today—International Matches in Prospect.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Upon the eve of the final matches which will decide the all comers national lawn tennis championship in singles the players about the courts and club today have been discussing the subject of the champion playing through in future tournaments, and the prospect of international competitions next year.

The first topic discussed was as to whether William A. Larned or Clarence Hobart stood the better chance of winning his way through to become the challenger of William J. Clothier, holder of the national title. With Larned as the victor it was general opinion the old system would remain, while with Hobart or any one of the younger players—Herbert L. Westfall, Richard H. Palmer, or Robert Leroy—being successful, the chances of a change were regarded as more likely of consummation.

Prince Wilhelm of Sweden visited the clubrooms during the hours around noon, and fraternized in a democratic sort of way with those of the players assembled there. This brought up the subject of internationals, as a year ago Sweden had expected to enter a team for the Davis cup contests at London, England. The prince said the Swedish lawn tennis players would welcome Americans, and left a general invitation for some of them to visit his country, as the lessons which they would impart would be valuable.

IN THE WORLD OF FINANCE

Policy of Administration for the Next Eighteen Months Clear.

TALK OF TARIFF REVISION.

Securities Market Continues to Show Absence of Buying Power.

It should now be reasonably clear to banking and business interests generally what will be the policy of the administration during the next eighteen months, and what will be the policy of the administration's candidate for the nomination for president. There should be little further occasion for either anxiety or curiosity as to what the president may say in future addresses. He has iterated and reiterated his position and each announcement has been substantially the same as the one preceding it coupled with the statement that no change of policy may be expected in the future.

It may be noted in this connection that occasionally there is heard isolated expression of either approval or quasi-approval of the president's course in quarters which at one time were distinctly unfriendly to the administration's policy. The interview of Jacob Schiff is a notable instance of a so-called high financier agreeing with the objects of the administration. It can be noted also in Chicago that the tone of business interests is generally more favorable since the things feared earlier as a result of the administration policy have not come to pass.

Tariff Revision Talk.

The talk now of a revision of the tariff is something that may be expected to gather force and is a subject which will necessarily prove disquieting to business interests. It will not be a matter of whether the tariff should or should not be revised, but it will be a business proposition involving the wisdom of purchasing goods before knowing what changes in tariff schedules are to be made. However the merchant or manufacturer might desire an increase or a lowering of the tariff, he cannot act in a business way until he knows what the change is to be, even though the change should be in accordance with his ideas.

Tariff discussions as a campaign issue have always, therefore, been a disturbing factor in business, and have occasioned more or less stagnation until definite action has been taken.

The thought suggests itself in this connection that a lowering of the tariff will reduce the profits of certain manufacturers, and may in turn affect wages. There is a distinct desire on the part of financial powers to bring about liquidation of the labor market. The question of the increased cost of living is not given so much consideration as the simple fact of the high price of labor.

Securities Market.

The securities market in the last week continued to show the absence of buying power on any considerable scale. There was, however, abundant evidence of buying for cash on the part of the small public. Those who have not been in the market for several years have begun to make cash investments instead of speculative purchases. This buying on the part of western investors is putting into Wall streeet some actual cash and at the same time assisting in cleaning up floating stocks. The buying mentioned cannot be expected to make a bull market, but it will help the situation. In the aggregate the volume of such cash purchases is large and if continued around current quotations will in time absorb a great quantity of securities and remove them from the market.

Trade in Wholesale Lines.

Country buyers have been present at all of the large distributing centers in large numbers the last week, and purchases of all of the staple lines have been heavy. In many lines the aggregate purchases were in excess of the same period last year, and the leading distributers said that there seemed to be little if any prospect of a falling off in trade.

In some quarters it is stated that there is a tendency towards retrenchment, due to the sharp slump in the stock market and poor crop indications in some sections, but otherwise the business tone seems to be healthy, with every prospect of a normally active season.

Few new developments were noted in the iron trade. Numerous orders for small quantities of pig iron for immediate shipment were reported, and there has been a little improvement in inquiries for future delivery. No particularly large orders were booked, however, although a few sales were made for delivery next year.

Abnormal Situation in Cotton.

An abnormal situation exists in cotton. The demand continues to absorb all the available offerings and the mills are running at full capacity, in spite of the high price of raw materials and expensive cottons. Prices are on a high basis, but there are no indications of a depression.

Lead, copper, tin, and some of the other metals are weak, and the demand has fallen off sharply. Some houses, however, are expecting the demand to pick up soon.

Retail stocks have been reduced in many instances by bargain sales, and the backward spring was more than recompensed by the larger sales later of dry goods, clothing, and boots and shoes.

STOCKS LOSE THEIR RECOVERY.

Brisk Rise in Opening Hour in New York Overcome by the Slump Which Follows.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—[Special.]—After a brisk recovery at the opening of business, during which many issues advanced as much as 2½ points, the slump again came into force yesterday and the general level fell even below the opening prices.

Sentiment was favorably affected by the plan of the treasury department to ease the money situation, and there were other favorable developments, including the statements of the commercial agencies, which reported a continuance of business in good volume.

Not all of the day's news was encouraging, however. Advices from the principal industrial centers were conflicting. There were persistent rumors also of another decline in the price of copper metal, and the general bank clearings showed heavy losses.

In the last hour the market developed increased heaviness, with severe declines in the active issues and the Eries and Southern railway preferred. The latter stock fell 2⅛ points, later making a further loss. Following the publication of the bank statement, the list manifested some strength, but the undertone at the closing was heavy.

United States 3s and 4s, registered, declined ⅛ per cent and the coupon 4s ¼ per cent on call. Total sales of bonds, par value, $568,000.

WHEAT IS ON THE UPGRADE

Sharp Advances on Frost Northwest and Strength Abroad.

COARSE GRAINS SOAR HIGH.

Poor Crop Reports and Improved Demand Lift Corn and Oats.

Frosts in the domestic and Canadian northwest, pronounced strength in European markets, a big and substantial pickup in the export trade, and a material increase in the domestic inquiry for flour formed ingredients in a bullish elixir that proved effective throughout the greater part of last week's wheat market. Despite the continued crippled condition of the telegraph service business in the pit at times was suggestive of activity shown in the "good old times," and there was a general dissipation of the gloom that hung over the trade the week before. The week end quotations, which were about ⅜c under the best showings of the period, showed net advances of 5½c for September, 5⅝@5½c for December, and 5⅛c for May, as compared with the final prices of the preceding week.

When the traders entered into operations on Monday morning they were confronted by the sensation stirring news that frost had swooped down on the spring wheat crop in northwestern Canada and in sections of northern North Dakota. This information, while lacking confirmation, had the effect to create mild panic in the ranks of the numerous shorts and to inspire confidence among the bulls. Prices were given a sharp lift. The following day brought something in the way of verifying advices, although the information that filtered through the wire blockade was far from satisfactory. It was, however, sufficiently strong to inspire caution among the bears. Profit taking was responsible for occasional reactions, but throughout the week bullish sentiment was sound. The later sessions were enlivened by messages confirming the frost reports, some of which indicated that vast damage had been done to the admittedly backward plant. In some sections the grain was said to be turning black as a result of the severe weather conditions.

Export Trade a Bull Trump.

While the first frost advices formed a big cog in the bullish wheel, the firmness abroad and the excellent demand for American wheat were considered by many traders to be the biggest cards in the hands of the bulls. Export business was on a much healthier basis than it has been for a year or more, advances here being promptly followed by the foreigners, who evidently are apprehensive over the general situation in Europe. With the telegraph service unimpaired, affording prompt communication between buyers and sellers, there is little doubt that the general export trade would have assumed much more pretentious proportions. Foreigners also were good buyers of American flour, millers in the northwest and the southwest saying that much improved business in the breadstuff is promised for the near future.

Bears Harp on Heavy Stocks.

The run of new winter wheat to the principal markets gave evidence of losing pressure, but the bears endeavored to offset this by harping on the heavy holdings of the old crop grain, laying special stress on the stocks of red winter in this city. The holdings here are not far from 17,000,000 bu in private and public houses. Bulls are inclined to attach decreasing importance to the big local stocks in view of the general situation abroad and the prospects of material shortage in the outturn in the spring wheat territory. They are satisfied that the seriousness in Europe has been clearly shown by the readiness with which the foreigners have taken our wheat.

Looks for Higher Values.

"I believe that the wheat market will work higher on legitimate conditions," said a market student, "and I do not look for any 'insane' doings in the pit. Influences are not as one sided now as in former years, when prices were boosted to the skies in a hurry. Admitting a general shortage the world over, traders must take into consideration the heavy holdings of last year's yield. Ultimately, however, I believe that Europe will be forced to take a big part of the burdensome stocks of red winter—this for the reason that she must have it or go without good bread flour. The situation in the northwest unquestionably is serious, although the extent of real damage from frost cannot be determined until warmer weather comes to disclose it. The lateness of the crop makes it highly probable that the grain will have to face more unfavorable weather conditions before it crosses the danger line."

Big Bull Turn in Corn.

Sensational developments marked the week in the corn market. The price balloon broke away from its moorings and kept up in the air the greater part of the week, notwithstanding strong currents of realizing. Sentiment was more bullish than it has been at any time this year. Increasing evidence of unfavorable crop progress, the general belief that even under ideal conditions the total yield will not be more than two-thirds of the "bumper" outturn of last year, unwillingness of country holders to sell at highly attractive bids, and a material improvement in the general cash situation were foremost among the factors of strength. Week end quotations, which were practically the top for the week, showed net advances of 5@5⅛c for September, 6c for December, and 5⅝c for May, as compared to the close of the preceding period.

John H. Wilkins, a dyed in the wool bull on the "golden cereal," communicated with 300 bankers, farmers, and business men in the principal corn sections of Iowa, Illinois, and Nebraska last week, and almost without exception the reports were radically bullish. Mr. Wilkins said: "Reports are particularly bullish regarding the prospects in Iowa, where a decrease in acreage and the poor stand promise not more than 75 per cent of an average yield. All reports agree as to this and also that the crop will not be out of the way of frost until from Oct. 1 to Oct. 10. Advices from other corn producing states, while distinctly bullish, are not so radical. They indicate, however, a general reduction in yield owing to the poor stand, and that the crop is from two to four weeks late. Regardless of weather conditions and possible or probable damage from frost, the crop prospects clearly warrant extremely high prices for the grain. The shortage in the oats crop is an important factor in creating a higher range for corn. I believe that corn is as safe a purchase as any one could ask for."

Oats Join in the Upturn.

Oats joined in the general upturn last week, the earlier sessions being marked by unusual activity and pronounced nervousness. Net advances of 5¼c for September, 3⅞c for December, and 3½c for May were shown for the week. Practically all the crop reports that came into the market indicated disappointing thrashing results and unusually light weights per bu. The movement from the country has scarcely been large enough to care for current requirements, and farmers have shown no marked disposition to accept the materially higher bids sent out to them. Stocks here and at all other leading centers are practically exhausted, and there is no question that the east and the south are in dire straits. Cash handlers last week were unable to fill all orders from the east. The grading of the grain received has been such as to preclude the probability of the building up of burdensome stocks. Patten is conceded to be the dominant figure in the market, and many a smaller trader has tried to keep pace with his actions. The September is badly congested, and market students look for a severe squeeze before delivery day arrives. The more distant months have followed the nearby future in such manner as to indicate fear on the part of shorts and confidence on the part of the general run of bulls.

Provisions Quiet and Firmer.

The provision list reached the end of the week with modest gains over the final quotations of the preceding period, although business at all times was dull and almost entirely devoid of feature. Late in the week there was improved buying of January products by speculators and a few outside investors who were attracted by the probable shortage in the corn crop and by the sharp discount under the nearer months. The general run of hogs at western points was not burdensomely heavy, and the cash demand for manufactured products showed improvement.

GOVERNMENT TO BUY HERE

Reclamation Service Will Purchase Supplies in Chicago.

CAN SAVE BY THE CHANGE.

Hereafter $2,000,000 a Year Is to Be Expended in This City.

A move for economy on the part of the reclamation service of the United States government will be worth more than $2,000,000 a year to Chicago. Just as soon as the appropriation for 1908—about $7,000,000—becomes available E. T. Perkins Jr., engineer in charge of transportation of the United States reclamation service, will become a purchasing agent for his department, and something more than 30 per cent of the entire amount will be expended in Chicago.

Heretofore the reclamation service has allowed the managers of its various enterprises in Arizona, California, Utah, Washington, Montana, and elsewhere in the far west to purchase their supplies where they saw fit. Then somebody in the government decided to check up some of the expense accounts, and made discoveries.

Big Saving by Buying in Chicago.

It was found that some supplies could be purchased in larger amounts in markets like Chicago and delivered to the various camps at a saving of from 20 to 70 per cent. Then the new plan was decided on.

Mr. Perkins, who, as head of the reclamation service in Chicago, has an office in the federal building, will become the purchasing agent of the service, although he has not been officially designated as such. The expenditures for the service will probably be made almost entirely through his office.

Supplies for the service will consist of cement, structural iron and steel, lumber, provisions, and clothing. For the last item alone the money expended will be considerable, upwards of 10,000 people being engaged in the work.

Twenty-seven Projects Under Way.

At present the reclamation service has twenty-seven projects under way, the work being in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North and South Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. The various projects will irrigate 2,000,000 acres of desert, which, it is expected, will add $120,000,000 to the national wealth and produce an annual crop worth $35,000,000.

All of these lands will be open to settlement, and the settlers will be charged only the actual cost of the irrigation work. Furthermore, they will be allowed ten years in which to make payment, without having to pay any interest in addition to the principal.

IN THE NEW YORK MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Both the primary and jobbing dry goods markets were quiet yesterday. The fact that many orders for goods of special weaves are received daily tends to show that the demand is still far in excess of the supply for all classes of cotton fabrics.

Metals—In the absence of cables, the metal markets were quiet and generally unchanged. Tin was dull, copper weak and unsettled, lead and spelter weak at recent prices. Iron was quiet at the decline.

Butter—Quiet and steady, unchanged; receipts, 6,317 pkgs.

Eggs—Steady to firm, unchanged; receipts, 9,918 cases.

Poultry—Alive, quiet and unchanged, in absence of important trading. Dressed—Quiet; western broilers, 17@20c; turkeys, 12@15c; fowls, 14@15c.

QUEST FOR PENNIES IS ON

"Tribune" Hospital Patient Displays Pathetic Enterprise.

WILL START CARD CRAZE.

Girl Waif Now Convalescent; Fearing Dad, Means to Hustle.

The spirit of modern commercialism has entered in at THE TRIBUNE'S summer hospital out at Algonquin. Miss Copeland, the head nurse, says it is pathetic, and doesn't quite know whether she likes it or not. Agnes, who started it, wouldn't know commercialism if she saw it in the dictionary; she calls it "git up an' git." Anyway, the souvenir postcard has been added to the list of attractions at the hospital and this is how it happened:

Agnes—she hasn't any other name, she says, except "Kiddo," and that isn't much of a name—was found a week ago trying to sell papers at the corner of Fifth avenue and Monroe street. It was hard work for several reasons. The territory wasn't good, and when Agnes did spot a possible customer some small boy who had never heard of chivalry usually was there ahead of her.

Thought All People "Tired Like."

And then Agnes was sick. She didn't know it until a kindly policeman looked at her closely and told her so, and later she confided to Miss Copeland that she had thought people were always that way—"tired like"—but the policeman took an interest in her and a day or two later the bureau of charities was notified.

Agnes went to THE TRIBUNE hospital. Now she is convalescent—decidedly so—but her inactivity and the lack of an income have been troubling her. For awhile she kept it to herself. Then she told Miss Copeland.

"Gee!" she said anxiously. "Not a cent for a week! Say, what d'you know about that? Dad'll just wipe up the floor with me when I git back!"

Miss Copeland tried to convince Agnes that her father would make allowances, but the child looked doubtful. Finally, on Friday, the inspiration came. Agnes brought Miss Copeland an oblong bit of cardboard, somewhat smudged.

"H'm! Isn't it nice!" said the nurse. "What is it?"

"Aw, Get Next! A Soov'nir Card."

"Aw, get next!" Agnes returned, scornfully. "Can't yer see it's a soov'nir postcard? I seen 'em in the drug store. I'm goin' to have a stand in front of the tent here an' sell 'em. Sure. You couldn't sell papes to these gazab—these kids."

Close investigation revealed the fact that the card contained a wonderful pencil drawing of the group of tents which, for the present, constitutes the hospital. An unfeeling nurse, to whom Miss Copeland showed the card, said the drawing looked like a plate of angel food cut pie shape. On the back was a neat square showing where to put the stamp.

Now Miss Copeland is wondering just how to handle the situation. In the meantime Agnes has been busy. And if the head nurse doesn't let her have her stand something is going to happen. Miss Copeland rather thinks she will let her have it.

GUARANTORS MUST STAND LOSS OF $3,500 IN BENEFIT FOR BOYS

Final "Eruption of Vesuvius" Exhibition Receipts Fail to Bring Total to $15,000 Minimum Demanded.

Pain's eruption of Vesuvius gave its final display for the benefit of the Allendale Farm for Boys at the old Washington park race track last night. The attendance was good, but not so large as upon the two Saturday nights of the two weeks' exhibition, when the box receipts totaled over $1,000. All other performances fell short, that of last night drawing $900.

That means that the fireworks company will fall considerably short of receiving the $15,000 demanded, after which the home was to receive a share. The "local expenses" will amount to about $6,000. This sum, less about $2,500 realized from the sale of box seats, or $3,500 approximately is the loss the guarantors will have to stand.

George Higginson, president of the board of trustees of the home, and Arthur Bissell and Victor Elting, members of the board, figured on $5,000 for local expenses, and believed that the guarantors would be called upon to make up a deficit of only $2,500. All parties interested say the contract was satisfactory.

MANY PERSONS ON VACATIONS EXPOSED TO TYPHOID GERMS.

More than Half of the Cases Investigated Prove to Have Originated at Rural Resorts.

Fourteen out of twenty-seven cases of typhoid fever investigated by the city health department, according to the department's bulletin for last week, were among persons who had been exposed to typhoid germs while out of the city for vacations.

The bulletin insists that typhoid fever cases should be as completely isolated as possible not only during the fever but throughout the period of convalescence and as long afterward as possible in order to prevent spread of the disease.

The chief medical inspector reported fifty-five cases of diphtheria, sixty-eight of scarlet fever, sixteen of whooping cough, seven of measles, twenty of typhoid fever, and four of tuberculosis. This is an increase of twelve diphtheria cases and of twenty-five scarlet fever cases over the preceding week. Typhoid fever, whooping cough and measles have slightly decreased in number as compared with the previous week.

The improvements in local government agitated for the last ten years are before the voters for adoption or rejection in the form of the Chicago charter, on which a referendum will be held Sept. 17. Only those whose names are on the official election register by tomorrow night will be permitted to vote on the charter. Voters who are not registered or who have moved out of their precincts since the city election last spring should go to their regular precinct polling places tomorrow between 8 a. m and 9 p. m. and see that their names are properly recorded.
